FIRE TAKES AWFUL TOLL IN CROWDED HOTEL

FIFTY LIVES FEARED LOST

DOOMED MEN LEAP FROM WINDOWS

STATE LEGISLATORS AMONG VICTIMS

Lansing, Dec. 11.
Roused from their sleep by the ominous cries of "Fire!" and driven into a state of panic by flames that leaped close around them, over 200 guests at the Kerns Hotel here struggled through fire exits, fled down the stairs and so to the streets, leaped from windows into the ice-fringed river upon whose bank the hotel stood, or perished. It is feared that fifty lives were lost.

Within a few hours of the outbreak police had accounted for 100 of approximately 200 guests known to have been in the hotel at the time the outbreak occurred. But it was anticipated that many of those listed as missing would be found safe.

Police stated that they believed between 20 and 50 bodies were buried in the ruins. Searchers cannot start digging until tomorrow. The guests in the hotel included twenty state legislators, five of whom were found dead and one of whom is missing. Another is believed to be dying of his injuries.

GHASTLY WORK
It was some hours before searchers could go into the ruins, but early in the morning the first effort was made. Bodies recovered were charred beyond identification in most cases.

Police made the ghastly discovery that there were an unknown number of dead in the river about this time. They had leaped from their windows when the fire was close upon them, in a desperate bid for life.

Some of the survivors of the fire fled from the hotel in ill-fated night attire and ran bare-footed into the snow-covered street when the temperature was only a few degrees above zero.—Reuter.

The United Press states that there are thirty seriously injured, most of them burned badly but some of them hurt by jumping from windows or suffering from exposure in the river.

Exchequer returns for the past week show that during the current financial year the total of ordinary revenue, exclusive of self-balancing revenues amounted at December 8 to £383,933,510, which is £1,265,576 less than the amount collected at the corresponding date last year.

Expenditure for the same period, exclusive of self-balancing items, was £490,403,267, which exceeds the amount expended at the corresponding date of last year by £10,968,694.—British Wireless.

OSTEOPATHS' BILL

London, Dec. 11.
The House of Lords carried Lord Ellbank's Bill for the registration and regulation of osteopaths. The vote was 36 to 20 against the Government's opposition. Lord Ellbank explained that the object of the measure was to remove disabilities attending the work of genuine osteopaths.—Reuter.

Minsk, Dec. 11.
Nine of the twelve persons charged in accordance with the recent terror decree, before the Military Tribunal, for organising and committing terrorist acts against Soviet officials, were to-day sentenced to death and immediately shot.

Three others were detained for further investigation. The majority of the accused entered Russia through Poland, carrying revolvers and hand grenades.—Reuter.

POLICING THE SAAR

TOTAL FORCE OF 3,300

London, Dec. 11.
As a result of the League Council's request that a British officer should be Commander-in-Chief of the International Force in the Saar, the War Office has appointed Major General G.E.S. Brind, D.S.O., C.M.G., to that post.

The British contingent, which will number approximately 1,500, will consist of Headquarters 13th Infantry Brigade (Commander Brigadier J.H.T. Priestman), the 1st Battalion of the Essex Regiment, together with a small detachment of other arms and services.

Major General Brind, who is an R.A. officer, was until recently Deputy Chief of the General Staff, Army Headquarters, India. He saw service in the South African War, and in the Great War was on the General Staff in France, Belgium and Italy.

TOTAL FORCE OF 3,300

The League Council concluded a notable session to-day with a brief meeting at which the report was adopted of the committee dealing with the question of International Saar force.

The Council decided that the Force, contributed from Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands and Sweden, will be placed at the disposal of the Saar Governing Commission, which is responsible for the maintenance of order. It will number approximately 3,300.

Any expenditure involved over that for which provision has already been made will be met by France and Germany.

The French representative, M. Massigli, announced that his Government would provide free transport for the detachments through France.

The Council adjourned until January 11, instead of until January 20, as previously arranged, and will thus be in session while the plebiscite is being held.—British Wireless.

The recent visit of Sir Henri Deterding to Berlin has been associated with the rumour that the Royal Dutch, combined with the Shell Company, had offered the German Government a loan of 40,000,000 Dutch guilders.

The report states that the loan will be advanced 60 per cent. in cash and 40 per cent. in petrol. Confirmation is not obtainable.—Reuter Special.

Anti-Nazi Demonstration In Vienna

POLICE FORCED TO INTERVENE

REMARKABLE SCENE AT OPERA

Vienna, Dec. 11.
A demonstration unparalleled in the history of Vienna State Opera occurred to-day when Professor Clemens Krauss, the present Director, who has been appointed by Dr. Goerring, Premier of Prussia, to succeed Professor Furtwangler as Director of the Berlin State Opera, conducted Verdi's "Falstaff."

Professor Krauss was received with loud cries of "Shame!" as he approached the Director's desk, followed by counter-cries from another part of the audience.

Eventually the police, with drawn truncheons, entered the auditorium in order to intervene in a clash between the rival demonstrators, a large number of arrests being made.

Professor Krauss, who was apparently unmoved by the demonstration, conducted the opera without further interruption.—Reuter.

FEDERAL AID TO ARMS EXPORTER

U. S. GOVERNMENT WAR STOCK SOLD TO JAPAN

FRESH REVELATIONS AT INVESTIGATION

Washington, Dec. 11.
The amazing revelation that the armament manufacturing firm of Dupont de Nemours had arranged with the United States War Department in 1922 to obtain from the army reserve stocks 160,000 rounds of ammunition to sell to Japan, was made at the Senate Arms Inquiry to-day.

A letter from the files of the Du Pont company contained this information, and it stated that though the procedure was not "quite regular" it was not contrary to army regulations.

A representative of the firm stated that when the War Department realised that Japan could get these war materials from England "they were glad to help us manufacturers."

Another letter, dated 1932, also taken from the Du Pont files, stated that the Navy Department considered it not only permissible but desirable that American firms should sell equipment and material to Japan. This opinion was based on the fact that it was desirable that the Navy should be informed about the nature and amount of the Japanese purchases, which information would be lacking if the purchases were made in Europe.—Reuter.

LEAGUE'S WORK PRAISED

YUGO-SLAVIA TO MAKE AMENDS?

BENES VIEWS SITUATION

Budapest, Dec. 11.
Yugo-Slav authorities assert that most of the Hungarians recently expelled from Yugo-Slavia will probably be allowed to return in the near future.

Reports from Prague state that in Dr. Benes' opinion the recent session of the League Council will have a most salutary effect upon international politics in 1935.

"We can be satisfied that if the League has settled such far-reaching problems as those in the Saar and between Yugo-Slavia and Hungary that we have won a battle against revisionism."—Reuter.

BRITISH SATISFACTION

London, Dec. 11.
Replying to a Commons question on the Yugo-Slav-Hungarian dispute, Sir John Simon expressed his satisfaction that the Yugo-Slavian appeal to the League, "which at times threatened to give rise to sharp differences of view, has now been dealt with in a way which should lead to reconciliation and appeasement."

He said the British Government had throughout been exerting themselves in all useful quarters to urge moderation. He took particular satisfaction in the important part which Mr. Eden, in co-operation with other members of the Council, had played in the matter.

"The outcome," added the Foreign Secretary, "now largely depends on the local situation as between Yugo-Slavia and Hungary, and it is sincerely to be hoped that this will improve. But there can be no doubt that the favourable position which has been reached from a situation which so recently appeared to threaten grave consequences, is due, first, and foremost to the existence and effective use of the League of Nations."—British Wireless.

MYSTERIOUS NOTE-BOOK

MAPS OF HARBOUR DEFENCES

(Special to "Telegraph").

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages, Ordinance, 1191. Received, December 11, 9.10 a.m.)

San Diego, Dec. 11.
Police to-day arrested a Japanese, Teruo Murameto, aged 29, who was allegedly found in a parked car near Fort Rosecrans gun emplacements with a note-book in his possession filled, so police believed, with maps and descriptions of the San Diego harbour defences. San Diego is one of the most important of the American naval stations.

At the police station Murameto maintained a stolid silence. An interpreter, however, said the mysterious note-book was simply a diary of an unemployed gardener.

The drawings, he explained, were really sketches of gardens. Murameto had drawn pictures of sailors in his garden sketches for decorative purposes, he said, and to "lie in the San Diego locale."

The drawings are extremely clever, and police do not know for certain whether they have their hands on a spy or an artistic genius.—United Press.

Two Freeze To Death In New York

CITY CAUGHT UNPREPARED

AMERICA IN WINTER'S GRIP

New York, Dec. 11.
Death, destitution and an epidemic of fires in the various parts of the United States have followed severe blizzards which swept from coast to coast.

New York suffered acutely in twelve degrees below freezing weather. Two deaths have occurred. Meanwhile, the authorities, who were not prepared for the cold snap, have hurried to prepare relief for out-of-work and homeless in the city. The first of shelters which will ultimately house 10,000 has just been opened.

Fire caused damage estimated at U.S.$20,000 at the Stealing Ship-building plant at Somerset, Massachusetts.

A new low record for the season was established in the neighbourhood of the Adirondack Mountains, the temperature dropping below zero from a mild autumn level almost overnight.

Six inches of ice covers the central Maine lakes and there has been a ten inch snow fall in Chicago.—Reuter.

FILM LAND NEWS

Overhaul of Films
Act Foreshadowed

SAFETY RULES.

A complete overhaul of the Films Act, especially in regard to safety regulations, will be made in the present Parliamentary session, it is stated.

Draft regulations are already drawn up, awaiting the signature of the Home Secretary. It is said, and these, if sanctioned, will be submitted to the House for approval.

One of the most vital effects of the new legislation will be to put sub-standard film stock under stricter control and to bring it virtually under the same restrictions as standard film.

Approach was made some time ago to the Home Office by the County Councils' Associations, and these new regulations are the sequel. They asked for an evening up of the law regarding non-flam and ordinary film.

The new regulations which are awaiting the Home Secretary's signature take especial regard of fast burning and slow burning film.

It is probably that the Governmental decision will be that there is in fact no such thing as non-flam film.

The net result of the new regulations will, of course, be to give Councils wider powers in regard to sub-standard and non-flam films. The law will, as demanded by the County Councils, be "evened up."

SHAKESPEARE PLAYS

Max Reinhardt, the German theatre producer, whose work on "The Miracle" is in recent memory of London audiences, has signed a long-term contract to make films for Warner Brothers.

Max Reinhardt, who is now in California, will devote himself to the production of classics for the screen, and as at present arranged (says Reuters) these will consist for the most part of Shakespeare's plays. Work on "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with Mendelssohn's music, was begun in November.

Max Reinhardt, who is a former director of the Josefstadt Theatre in Vienna and of the Grosses Schauspielhaus in Berlin, relinquished his appointments in Germany following the anti-Jewish campaign of the Nazis.

GREATEST VAMPS

Greta Garbo is one of the six greatest vamps now acting for the screen, according to a list drawn up in San Francisco by Theda Bara, who, in the days of silent films, was acclaimed to be the world's greatest vamp.

The five other stars she has selected are: Marlene Dietrich, Katharine Hepburn, Mae West, Jean Harlow, and Alice White.

Theda Bara refuses to return to the films. She prefers to live quietly in Beverly Hills with her husband, Charles K. Brabin, the director.

RECRUIT FOR THE FILMS

Miss Penelope Dudley Ward, elder daughter of Mrs. Dudley Ward, has become a film actress. She has been given the part of a lady of the Court in "The Dictator," the production starring Clive Brook and Madeleine Carroll.

She is regarded by film experts as having great possibilities, and six months ago it was suggested that she might play a leading part opposite Emil Jannings.

Miss Ward, who speaks French and German fluently, is only 19.

MARLENE'S NEXT

"Caprice Espagnole" will be Marlene Dietrich's next starring picture for Paramount. It will be directed by Josef von Sternberg, and definitely replaces "Lady of the Lions," "Lorelei" and "Red

APPLE SANDWICHES

SPRINKLE some buttered slices of brown bread with Demerara sugar. Peel some eating apples, cut them into fairly thick slices and put a layer on the bread and butter, cover with another slice of sugared bread and butter, and cut into sandwiches. This makes particularly nourishing and attractive sandwiches that particularly appeal to children.

FILM "CYCLES"

We hear a lot from time to time about "cycles" and fashions in types of pictures. Critics periodically accuse the producers of being sheeplike in following up something successful with imitations or sequels which lack spontaneity.

There are two sides to this question (writes P. L. Mannoek in the Kinematograph Journal). Slavish imitation is facile. On the other hands, reasonable follow-up of something which, though successful, was hitherto regarded as rashly experimental, is often commercially, if not always artistically, sound.

The difficult point is to decide where this "vogue" goes past demand, and becomes saturation. I consider that the time has come when British producers may wisely give up making "costume" subjects for a little while.

Since Korda's "Henry VIII," triumph most British studios have boldly launched, at enormous cost, a series of period stories, made with great care and elaboration. Had it not been for Korda's example, I very much doubt whether so many of them would have been made.

They are still being made, and the sum of money locked up in them represents a very frightening proportion of the capital available

HEROIC RESCUES

WEYMOUTH FIRE OUTBREAK

AGED WOMAN PERISHES

One woman is dead and three other persons—a garage proprietor, his son, and daughter—are lying in Weymouth District Hospital seriously injured as a result of a fire on Weymouth sea front in the early hours of the morning. It broke out in the drawingroom of a flat above the garage of Mr. Dan Guy, of Gloucester Row, Weymouth.

The flames spread so rapidly that the people sleeping in the rooms above, by jumping in one case, and by heroic rescues on the part of an hotel chef in another case, escaped the fate of a 70-year-old woman, Mrs. Bloxham, of Cheltenham, sleeping alone on the top floor, who was trapped in the blazing flat with all means of escape cut off, and was brought out dead.

The people in the flat were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Guy, their grown-up son and daughter, and Mrs. Bloxham, of Cheltenham.

It was the terrifying screams of the women at the windows in their night attire which brought people to the spot, including Mr. Fenner, a chef at a hotel next door, who got a short ladder and, balancing it on the sign above the garage entrance, helped Mrs. Guy and her daughter down. Then he helped the son. The two latter were badly burnt. Mr. Guy, senior, jumped from a third-floor window and broke a leg.

At the window of a bedroom above appeared the terror-stricken figure of Mrs. Bloxham, for one moment only. She was not seen alive again.

RESCUERS RISK LIVES

A dance of the United Services Portland, was in progress at the hotel at the time, and the last waltz was being danced when men rushed into the ballroom shouting "Fire." The music stopped at once, and the dancers, men and women in evening dress, rushed out into the cold night.

They found the fire blazing above the garage where their cars were standing. Several officers sealed the 50 foot parapet and tried to get to the imprisoned women in the top bedroom, but their efforts failed. They were driven back every time.

One officer was seen to scale the parapet and hang suspended from the coping trying to get into the bedroom through the window by kicking the glass in.

He failed after a most gallant attempt, in which he risked being hurled to the ground himself.

Mr. Fenner afterwards went on to the roof, and was lowered on a rope in an attempt to rescue Mrs. Bloxham.

"When I first went up the ladder I got within two feet of her window," he said. "She was terror-stricken, and I shouted to her to lean out as far as she could and breathe deeply. She sagged backwards and forwards, and then went out of sight."

Captain H. C. Mayo, a retired naval officer, who placed a wet handkerchief over his face, went up a ladder, and nearly got into Mrs. Bloxham's room, but he was defeated by the thick smoke and flames.

Mrs. Bloxham was a visitor to Weymouth, where her husband, Major Bloxham, is lying ill in a nursing home.

for the whole of our production industry.

There are signs that they are in danger of being overdone. My instinct, if I were a studio chief, would be to "go slow" on them. However artistic they may turn out to be, failure in this class of film is inevitably a more serious financial jolt.

SIAM'S SYMPATHETIC AUTOCRAT

LOVE OF PEOPLE GIVES KING HIS POWER

By EDWARD E. BRODIE

(FORMER U.S. MINISTER TO SIAM)

KING Prajadhipok, who is threatening to abdicate unless the constitutional government of Siam withdraws its plan to further curtail the royal prerogatives, is in a unique position. He is probably the only man in the entire kingdom who holds the firm allegiance—amounting almost to worship—of the great majority of the Siamese people, who until two years ago had never heard of such a document as a constitution and are not aware of its true political significance. It is this personal admiration and respect of his millions of subjects that strengthens the attitude of the monarch in his present effort to keep his royal rights.

It is quite conceivable that the abdication of King Prajadhipok would precipitate a revolution in a country that has existed under an absolute ruler for hundreds of years. This absolutism has continued until recently when Prajadhipok consented to the establishment of a constitutional monarchy which he had himself hoped to bring about in a more gradual and orderly fashion.

The Siamese as a nation have a deep and peculiar veneration for their King. The abdication of Prajadhipok would inevitably mean the fall of the dynasty and the election of a president or the assumption of power by a dictator. This would possibly mean chaos to the same degree as followed by the fall of the empire of China.

Oriental mentality is quite similar wherever found. And, the prevalence of illiteracy in the Orient is one reason for autocracy. The autocracy has been fairly benevolent under the sway of the Chakri dynasty.

DATES BACK TO 1925

Transformation of the Government of Siam from an absolute to a constitutional monarchy was conceived by King Prajadhipok the very night he assumed the throne on Nov. 26, 1925. His brother, Rama VI, who had ruled the country since 1910, after their father, the famous Chulalongkorn, had no such modern views.

Rama VI possessed great personal charm, held the loyalty of the masses, played magnificently and glamorously, but responsibility of administration were directed by favorites, aided by 200 foreigners who served in technical capacities. It was the late Lord Northcliffe who said that entertainment in the palace of Rama was more lavish than at the Court of St. James's.

Prajadhipok is no visionary. Devoted to his country, notwithstanding his long absences abroad, he felt that a limited constitutional regime should be established, but he then felt no reason for haste. He was the seventh king of a dynasty which has functioned so successfully that Siam stood alone in southern Asia as the only free and independent nation. He made his plans carefully and gradually, appointing a supreme council of state composed of five senior princes, and providing for a legislative council of ministers which, with others, all named by the sovereign, had a membership of 40.

The country, with a balanced budget, was prosperous, the people were content, the new King was a conservator of public revenues, and he seriously set about the preparation of a constitution which he believed could be adapted to the mentality of his partially literate followers.

NOT USED TO REVOLTS

Siam was not accustomed to revolutionary disturbances. The natives are good-natured and as indolent as the general run of people who live in a tropical climate. So in 1931 Prajadhipok came to the United States without misgivings, leaving his half-brother, Prince Paribatra of Narathiwat, in the position of regent.

It was during that comparatively brief period that this ambitious and reactionary royal personage worked furiously to devise a constitutional formula that would with one hand hold out to the people a representative system of government, while maintaining in the other complete control of the principal places of power for members of the reigning family. He had travelled quite a distance on this path when the King returned. While the details of what came next are somewhat obscure, it is freely admitted that when a sudden revolt shook the whole country, the king quietly and graciously acquiesced in the new deal. While it lost him the support and co-operation of the princes who were fitted by training and experience for ministerial posts, it enabled him to view the banishment of Paribatra with equanimity.

Government positions are no longer princely pickings. It being a constitutional stipulation that members of the royal household are barred from cabinet posts. The wisdom of this inhibition may well be questioned as it relegated to private life such men as the capable and cultured Prince Damrong Rajanubhab.

REACTION

The counter revolution of the summer of 1933 was futile, although temporary occupation of the central air-drome and plant at Donmuang caused considerable uneasiness. The movement represented an undisguised attempt to regain for members of the royal family the various prerogatives and benefits they had enjoyed for generations under a system of absolutism. The principal stabilizing factor was His Majesty King Prajadhipok, who sincerely desires to lead his people along the broad road of constitutional government and to reform the abuses that were common under his immediate predecessor.

There is slight comparison between the Siamese Revolution and those of some other countries, but it is significant that army chiefs, resenting salary decreases which came as one of the government economy measures. Moreover, the germs of political unrest stirred in the breasts of a number of Siamese, who had been educated abroad and who chafed under conditions which restricted career advancement.

A youth of Siam, after seeing countless opportunities for individualism abroad, found them denied to him upon return to his native land. He could rise, but the top positions in the Government were generally reserved for those born to the purple. Most of these young men had been trained in the United States and England where the accident of birth counts for little in the selection of government leaders, and where merit is recognized, no matter how lowly the beginnings.

THE SIMPLE LIFE

Communism has had no part in the Asiatic drama as played in Siam. The people are by nature conservative and there has been no oppression in their routine to excite them to rally around communistic standards. Their needs are few. The rice fields and fishing streams provide sustenance. The problem of sufficient clothing does not exist.

They are allowed to cultivate their paddy lands in peace and they would be the first to resist any attempt to socialize their belongings. Rice is the life-food of the country and in a one-crop land, where agricultural conditions are similar to those of Japan, but where living is easier and land is plentiful, it may be expected that agrarian legislation will occupy an important place in parliamentary deliberations.

"The only sizable foreign colony is represented by 250,000 Chinese in Bangkok, but the Siamese Government has been steadfast in its refusal to discuss treaty relations with its huge northern neighbour, and the alien population of the capital is not difficult to control.

Foreign Eyes

Keenest interest in Siam's internal political affairs is naturally evidenced by Great Britain and France. The reason is chiefly geographical. Forty years ago the French cast covetous eyes on the kingdom, and the invasion of 1893 cost Siam all of her possessions on the left bank of the Mekhong. For 12 years French troops occupied Siamese territory, evacuating Chantabun in 1905.

The Cambodian provinces were ceded to France in 1907, and two years later the suzerainty of the Malay states of Trengganu, Kelantan, Kedah and Perak was transferred to Great Britain. Siam, now with an area greater than that of Great Britain and Ireland, remains a buffer state between French Indo-China and British Burma, a situation particularly satisfactory to British interests.

NATIONALISM IN SCHOOLS

LEAGUE SEEKS TO PURGE BOOKS CO-OPERATION SOUGHT

Geneva.

Study of international relations is a subject which is becoming of increasing interest to the world. It is stated in a report to the League of Nations by the Intellectual Co-operation Organisation.

A programme for the coming year includes study for the formation of an intellectual elite, and the origins of western civilisation. A vast new field, that of social and political science, has been opened up to intellectual co-operation as a result of the initiative taken in 1933 and 1934 by Prof. James T. Shotwell and M. Edouard Herriot, chairman of the governing body of the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation.

It is proposed: 1. To draw up a list of the institutions and organisations which engage, in the different countries and internationally, either in research or teaching in the field of social and political science; 2. To initiate research into the principles and methods of the various subjects into which they may be divided, and 3. To undertake a series of studies of certain specific problems. The first of these studies will concern the effects of mechanisation on modern civilisation.

Another interesting proposal, in the educational sphere, is that which concerns the revision of school textbooks. The committee on intellectual co-operation contemplates supplementing the improvement schemes now in existence by the preparation of a standard draft bilateral agreement for the abolition of differences in the interpretation of certain historical events in the textbooks now in use.

"We believe," says the report, "that no work for international organisation in the world, for an international order and, consequently, for peace, will be durable, or even possible, if not accompanied by a corresponding effort in the intellectual sphere."

the country. Whatever protection absolute government disappeared a charter membership in the League of Nations guarantees to which naturally attracted world wide interest.

Could a people of ten millions, whose knowledge of self government is almost wholly lacking, most the responsibility with a true appreciation of the blessings of democracy? The answer was not to be written immediately. And the new developments which have culminated with the reported abdication of the King, indicate that Siam stands, not at the end of a chapter, but at the beginning of a new uncharted period.

AMERICAN SERVICE

I.M.M. TO ABANDON ITS ATLANTIC RUN

New York, Dec. 11. The International Mercantile Marine will discontinue its Red Star sailings with the departure of the Westernland for Antwerp tomorrow.

The Westernland, Belgium and Pennland will be sold or scrapped, in conformity with the I.M.M. plans to sell their foreign services and concentrate on a 100 per cent. American service.

The British Government last month refused assistance to a British project to buy these ships and run them between England and New York, charging a fare of £10. The Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, said the scheme would frustrate the recently obtained rationalisation from the merging of the Cunard and White Star lines.—Reuter.

CORONER'S INQUEST

WOMAN HAS THE WRONG MAN ARRESTED BY POLICE

A coroner's inquiry conducted by Mr. J. L. Lee at the Kowloon Magistracy into the death of Chan Shi-cheung, a 70-year-old woman living at 208 Sai Yeung Choi Street, Shamshui, who succumbed to injuries after a fall, was again adjourned yesterday.

The jury comprised Messrs. T. C. Fairburn (Foreman), H. M. Campos and P. M. da Silva, Jr.

The deceased's daughter-in-law, Leung Sung, aged 38, an earth cooler, gave evidence that she saw her mother-in-law's body in the Kowloon Mortuary in the presence of a woman named Wong Tai, Sergeant Allen, a Chinese detective and a doctor, on October 23.

Witness stated that her mother-in-law was an unlicensed vegetable peddler. She lived with witness at 208 Sai Yeung Choi Street, ground floor. The last time witness saw deceased alive was at the Kwong Wah Hospital on October 23.

On October 27, witness went with her mother-in-law to the Wing Tung Hing vegetable stall in Yau-mat about 8 a.m. At the stall witness' mother-in-law discussed the price of taro roots with a man, who said that the price was $2.10 per picul. Deceased offered the man $2 but the man refused and they both walked away. The man then called the deceased back and agreed to let her have the roots for $2 per picul. Witness' mother-in-law then said that she did not want the vegetables because he would not let her have them for $2 at first.

Pushed to Ground

On refusing to buy the vegetables the deceased was pushed by the man, and she fell backwards to the ground. The man pushed her on the chest with both hands. When she fell deceased struck her head on the ground. Witness then picked her up, and deceased scolded the man. After walking about thirty yards away from the stall deceased had difficulty in walking to the stall down on the side of the wall of the nullah running along the street, and vomited. When witness picked deceased from the ground, she noticed a lump on the back of deceased's head. Witness also alleged that the man who pushed her mother-in-law pushed her (witness) first, but she did not fall.

At this stage witness on being questioned stated that it was not the man who bargained with deceased who pushed the deceased down but another man, who was a pock-marked man. Witness was quite sure that the man who pushed deceased was a man with a pock-marked face.

When deceased sat down by the side of the nullah witness went home and returned with the deceased's adopted daughter, Wong Tai, and they both took her to the Yau-mat Police Station in a rickshaw and made a report. Deceased was later taken to the hospital in an ambulance.

Wrong Man Arrested

Later in the day, about 12 noon, witness accompanied the police to the stall where the incident took place. The next day, October 29, witness again accompanied the police to the stall and a man named Lai Fook was arrested.

When this man, Lai Fook, was brought into Court witness stated that this was the man who was arrested, but he was not the man who pushed her mother-in-law. She had made a mistake.

In the course of the evidence given by Ho Mui, aged 31, an odd job cooler employed at the Wing Tung Hing vegetable stall, he admitted that he had bargained with the deceased regarding the price of some vegetables, but he denied having called her back again after she had walked away. Deceased after leaving his stall went to another and bargained about the price of turnips, which she again refused to buy. This stall-holder then scolded her and told her to go away. Witness also scolded deceased. A man named Ho Wong, alias "Tau Poi Chai" then came and pushed her and asked her to go away. On being pushed deceased fell backwards to the ground. Witness denied having seen anybody push the last witness. The inquiry was adjourned at this stage.

Booking for the pantomime "Sinbad the Sailor," which will be played at the European Y.M.C.A., Kowloon, on December 19, 20 and 21, is now open. Seats can be booked for all performances, including the matinee. In connection with this forthcoming pantomime, the public will enter by the main door in Salisbury Road. The Ashley Road entrance is reserved for the performers.

POPULAR ROTARIAN

MR. M. F. KEY WELCOMED BACK TO THE COLONY

Yesterday's meeting of the Rotary Club at the Hongkong Hotel was somewhat in the nature of a welcome to Mr. M. F. Key, Secretary of the Hongkong General Chamber of Commerce and Joint Hon. Secretary of the Hongkong Rotary Club, who returned to the Colony on Monday after an eight months' tour of the world.

Mr. M. K. Lo, President of the Club, was in the Chair, and extended a hearty welcome to Mr. Key, to Mr. Li Tse-fong and the following guests:—Messrs. A. T. Lay (Hongkong); A. E. Herodall (Hongkong); C. F. Gambell (Hongkong); A. L. Bousset (Hongkong); Chester Bennett (Hollywood); N. A. Mallal (Singapore); M. Benjamin (Shanghai); and S. G. Kirkland (Shanghai).

It was announced by the Chairman that a letter had been received from the Canton Rotary Club inviting members of the Hongkong club to attend the first anniversary of the Canton club, which was to be celebrated in the form of a supper dance.

The Chairman also announced that at the next meeting of the Rotary Club, Mr. C. Champkin, assisted by Mr. A. W. Mackinlay, had kindly agreed to dramatise Charles Dickens' immortal "A Christmas Carol."

Mr. Key's Return.

In welcoming the return of Mr. Key, Mr. Lo said that this energetic Rotarian had visited no fewer than 74 Rotarian and other clubs during his world tour. He had worked hard in the interest of the Hongkong Rotary Club, and Mr. Lo said that word failed him in attempting to express the thanks of the club. Mr. Key had represented Hongkong at the Rotary International Convention at Chicago, and had succeeded in many places in placing Hongkong on the map.

Mr. Lo then called upon three former Presidents of the Club, Sir William Hornell, Mr. T. B. Wilson and Hon. Mr. S. W. T'ao, in the order named, to thank Mr. Key on behalf of the Club. Mr. M. J. B. Montargis also said a few words. In a humorous vein, Mr. Key made brief comments on different aspects of his world tour, taking his audience along with him from the time he left Hongkong to North China, Japan, Honolulu, America, Europe, India, Indo-China, Cambodia, Siam and back to Hongkong. Mr. Key paid a tribute to the wonderful hospitality of the Americans, with whom he stayed for two months. He was given a great reception not only by Rotarians but also by people who were not Rotarians. It did not matter where he went; it was the same everywhere.

The speaker announced that he was writing his experiences in the Club's Bulletin, and he would not like to say too much in detail at the moment.

Mr. F. E. Webb, who was reported missing last Tuesday from his room at Airline Hotel, made his reappearance on Friday, and was reported at the Water Police Station.

The "Hongkong Singers" recommenced their rehearsals to-morrow at 5.30 p.m. in the Union Church Hall, Kennedy Road. There are a few vacancies for sopranos. Application should be made to the Hon. Conductor, 4 Luna Building, Kowloon (Tel. 50283) for voice test and classification. Good readers are essential.

"Hush!" by Edith Manning.

Tread softly on the stairway,
An' softly close the door,
Our baby's got a fever,
Which he's never had before.
Moe' times he is so happy,
An' now to hear his cries,
Brings such a dreful heart-ache,
And burning to my eyes.
I thought I'd ask the doctor,
To make him quickly well,
'Cos he's our only baby,
Now I'm a growed-up gel.
But doctor only smiled and said,
'Jus' run and play, my dear,
'We've Tablets that are Baby's Own,
'There's nothing much to fear.'
So now I feel much happier,
'Cos always when I'm sick,
I ask my mummy for them too,
An' get well—Oh! so quick!

A TRIUMPH FOR COMMON-SENSE

What threatened to develop into a first-class European crisis, possibly involving the major Powers, has been averted by Hungary's acceptance of a compromise resolution dealing with the subject of terrorist activities, with special reference to the recent Marseilles outrage. This resolution condemns the Marseilles murders, calls on Hungary to fulfil her international obligations by taking appropriate measures against authorities found culpable of negligence, and sets in train machinery for the eventual conclusion of an international convention designed to prevent political terrorism. In this manner has the threat of hostilities in the Balkans been warded off. We need only take our minds back to the incident at Sarajevo, which was the culminating point in a state of tension leading to the Great War, to realise how, but for the intervention of pacifying influences, the Yugo-Slavian-Hungarian quarrel might easily have developed into a situation imperilling the peace of Europe. Britain, happily, through the medium of Mr. Anthony Eden, was able to exercise a restraining influence at the crucial moment, and was effectively supported by France and Italy. A tribute is due to the statesmen of these countries at the happy culmination of their efforts, and at the same time Hungary is to be commended for accepting the compromise plan in a spirit which illustrates her sincere desire for a sensible solution of a delicate issue. The recriminations now at an end, it is for all nations to work together in the common task of preventing, as far as is humanly possible, the hatching and carrying out of terrorist plots for political purposes. There is another aspect of the successful adjustment of this threat to European peace which deserves especial emphasis—namely, the fact that it was through the instrumentality of the League of Nations that the issue was smoothed out. League prestige will be greatly enhanced by this fresh triumph. Indeed, it is not too much to say that, on this incident alone, the League's creation and continued existence have been more than vindicated. It was precisely for the handling of such threats to world peace that the League was brought into being. Had it not been in existence, there can be little doubt that Europe would once again have become involved in the toils of a major catastrophe, the eventual upshot of which would have been disaster to everybody concerned.

NOTES OF THE DAY
DEPRESSED AREAS

There is universal agreement that energetic measures are required to deal with the distress in the four depressed areas: South Wales, Cumberland, the North-East Coast, and South Scotland. Four Government Commissioners have investigated conditions there and drawn up reports which were published and debated in the House of Commons recently, when Mr. Neville Chamberlain announced that the Government has decided to take certain emergency measures forthwith. A vote of £2,000,000 is promised at once, and two Commissioners are to be appointed with wide powers. They will carry out emergency schemes while the recommendations of the four reports are being further examined. Various suggestions were put forward by Mr. Chamberlain as to the directions in which action might be taken, and he mentioned land drainage among other things. "We are a little surprised that the provision of more new aerodromes was not included among the projects," says the Daily Mail, continuing agitation for Britain's defence. "Their construction would employ a very considerable number of workers. Some sites have already been acquired in connection with the Government's air programme, but considerably more are needed for the very great increase in the number of our aircraft which is inevitable."

CAPITAL SHIPS

Decision on America's ship-building policy is complicated by the fact that there is still a good deal of uncertainty about the type of ships the American navy ought to have. Naval authorities in the main stand firm for a fleet built about a strong nucleus of capital ships, or battleships, renowned by a considerable number of heavy cruisers. Yet there is a wide belief that the battleship has outlived its usefulness, and that the terrific expense of maintaining these costly vessels is one the navy might very well avoid. Add to this the growing feeling that aeroplanes and submarines are revolutionising naval warfare, and you have a situation in which decision on a naval programme would be difficult enough, even if it were not necessary to adjust programmes to those of other powers. A good exposition of the theory that the battleship is still the backbone of the fleet came recently in a public address by Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig, acting chief of U.S. naval operations.

FLOATING FORTRESS

America, says Admiral Taussig, needs the battleship because of its lack of naval bases—the battleship, with its wealth of heavy guns, serving as a kind of floating base which can protect lighter ships against superior forces. Furthermore, says Admiral Taussig, the improvement of the submarine and aerial branches of naval warfare has made the battleship even more indispensable than before. It is the only warship which can be armoured and protected sufficiently to withstand the shock of bombs and torpedoes. Here we have a brief and understandable outline of the majority viewpoint in the navy; and it is worth reading, as an antidote to the free and easy talk one constantly hears about the obsolescence of the battleship. We are often assured that submarines and aeroplanes are the all-important units of a fleet in modern times; but the experts charged with maintenance of the navy still believe—that a fighting fleet, in the last analysis, is only as strong as its capital ships.

POLITICAL PUZZLE

The profound public unrest in France, which found violent expression in the riots of a few months ago, evidently still exists. It is hardly going too far to say that the republic right now is meeting one of the severest tests in its history. The Doumergue cabinet, seeking to revise the French constitution so as to end the notorious instability of governments, has fallen. In recent years the average life of a French cabinet has been nine months. A government which must fall every time it attempts to handle any really controversial measure cannot provide the leadership which the nation needs. So Premier Doumergue tried to change things, putting more power in the hands of the Premier, clipping the wings of Parliament and sharing the innumerable blocs of their power to precipitate a cabinet crisis whenever the mood seized them. Against this plan the cry of dictatorship was raised. It is not yet clear whether the French democracy will be able to preserve and strengthen itself in this time of confusion and trial. No-one, it is certain, feels like trying just at present.

REMAKING WORLD'S GREAT CITIES

By PROF. C. H. REILLY

THE Government will introduce a measure early in the new session of Parliament, which begins next week, prohibiting ribbon development along the great arterial roads. This is one aspect of the larger problem raised by the King's eloquent appeal recently for the use of the imagination in the shaping of the world of streets in which millions spend their lives. His words should make us all think anew of our cities as things the outward aspect of which we all to a certain extent own. If the London County Council adopts, as its Town Planning Committee suggests, the Town and Country Planning Act of 1932 for the whole town, it will be in a position to control, as certain provincial cities already can by their private Acts of Parliament when they care to do so, which, it must be confessed, is not often—the height, shape and colour of every new building.

It will be able to lay down guiding rules for those about to build, saying, for instance, that such and such a street should be a stone one, such and such a red brick one, and so on. We can have if we like Piccadilly as gay with electric signs as Broadway, New York, and Pall Mall as free as the adjacent Fifth Avenue. These are immense powers and when to them is added the power to clear great areas of slums and replan them, closing and abolishing streets and building courtyard after courtyard of great buildings, holding within them gardens, playgrounds and swimming pools, it will be seen we are at the start of a new era.

Leeds is already planning to rebuild a third of the city. What are we going to do in London? First, I think we must free our hands still further. The old London Building Act still blocks the way as regards the height of buildings. No building can be erected with its main front wall to the street higher than eighty feet, and then with two set-back storeys above that. A flat rate, except for towers and domes, was then imposed for the whole town, regardless of the varying widths of the streets, the new ways of living in flats and tenements, the improvement in lifts, the lessening of the smoke nuisance due to the lesser number of domestic chimneys, and, most of all, regardless of the architectural advantages of having prominent sites where they would not overshadow their neighbours, and where they might relieve the monotony of a town of all one height. A new Building Act is always under consideration. Let us hope that it gives the central authority power to allow such buildings under proper safeguards and with proper rating. Stockholm has, for instance, the fine dramatic effect, denied to us, of two identical tall buildings forming a gateway to one of her main streets.

As these streets lead to the open country they must cease to be lined with little houses. Town planners have been calling attention to the danger to life and to the destruction of the beauty of the countryside such ribbon development has caused for 20 years. New York had stopped such development before the war. Only now, however, has our Government woken up to it. More important still would be the power to acquire property other than slum property for public improvements, such as the County Council is now seeking to enable it to form an embankment on the south side of the river. Assuming then London and by that I mean something much bigger than the present County Council area, had obtained the power to remodel it for the benefit of all, and in a way to allow the King's appeal for the use of the imagination to be effective, what would be some of the first things at which we should aim. Before anything else I should put the abolition of smoke, so that we could have a clean town. London is already far cleaner than many large provincial towns, but it is, nevertheless, far behind most Continental ones. Secondly, I suggest, as has often been done before, we should quickly schedule a wide belt of land round the town to be for ever unbuilt on. This belt should be connected by wide parkways lined with trees and grass to the present outer parks, or to the inner ones if they can be reached, so that not only could one quickly get away from the streets to the country, but the country air could penetrate to town.

Thirdly, the slum clearance should go on, but far greater areas, stretching from one main road to another, should be involved in each scheme, as Liverpool is doing to-day. It has been proved that with lifts and structures 120ft. high, half as high again as is at present allowed, the actual buildings need not occupy more than 6 per cent. of the land, the rest being open space where there is at present a tangle of little roads and little houses. If we did this on a brave enough scale all living rooms could face the sun. We could give to everyone the light and air—indeed, far more of them—that the houses in the West End get from their squares and parks. Until we rebuild great sections of the town and abolish the streets save for a few main traffic ones between the blocks, we might do as Salford has already done, and close a few hundred yards with posts and chains, making them thereby safe playgrounds for children and safe sitting-out places for the aged. We might go farther and make them gay with colour wash and bright paint and bushes in the tubs from the parks. The few great traffic streets left must be made to dip under and over one another and be connected by ramps. With no cross streets, traffic can be faster still, not slower, and yet safer. As we get to the special purposes, factory areas, warehouse areas, business areas. Each must have its special character of road and building.

SAY IT WITH SLOGANS

By George

ARE we becoming a pampered race?

That was the question that loomed like a menace in our mind as we confronted our mirror yesterday.

We were about to amputate a Charlie Chase moustache which had sprung up like a mushroom growth in the exciting hours of the night.

About us was the romantic scent of eau de cologne, lavender shaving soap and carbolic whilst we, in full negligee, completed the picture of a Man of the Twentieth Century.

The telephone bell rang and we draped a towel over our shoulders on our way out to the hall. The text for the day was "Your Luck's out if you're no Lux in. If you must wash, use Lux and make work a luxury."

We sighed and picked up the telephone. It was the girl. We hastily transferred the towel to our waist—After all we are not yet engaged.

"Hullo dear! Have you had your Ovaltine?"

"Sweetheart! We haven't cleaned our teeth yet."

"Well don't forget to use Forhan's."

We smiled. "You won't dare smile if pyorrhea attacks your teeth."

We pulled the towel a little closer.

"Keep that school girl complexion," we retorted.

"Use white nugget and start the day with a good polish."

"What is Xmas without fruit or flowers?"

"What shall I give?"

"Kiln beer is the choice of the multitude."

"Don't be fooled by platitudes. Findlater's Dry Gin."

"Later may be too late. A stitch in time..."

"Makes father's pants fit little Willie."

"Anyway how are you?"

"Lactogen has made me twice the woman I was."

"Good God. I refuse to take two women out." (coolly).

"You've done it before and got away with it." (nastily).

"I thought we had buried the past." (plaintively).

"What do you take me for? An undertaker?"

"No honey. An alarm clock. Do you realise that it is only 10 a.m.? I'll give you a ring later."

"And make a honest woman of me?"

"Not necessary, sweetheart."

And that nature in the raw, we reflected philosophically as she hung up on us.

The landlady perceived that there was a rift in the lute. "Say it with flowers," she advised sympathetically. "Nuts."

"Yes, you must eat more fruit."

We threw a flower pot on her head and went back to our toilet.

The Boy rushed up the stairs shouting "aspirin will cure your headache."

It's A Hot Idea

Star-Bulletin, Honolulu, Hawaii, Gentlemen:

I suppose that because you are in the tropics all the people are complaining about the heat and if they don't complain, they should. Why be hot when you can be cool? I have a brand new patent to reduce your temperature and have everybody at business and at home nice and cool all the day.

My patent is to have all the streets of Honolulu and the whole island flooded with two feet of water; then put ammonia pipes underneath the water, then turn on the ammonia and freeze all the water. Everybody can ice-skate to work and your temperature will drop sixty degrees.

Truly yours,

No Use To Discuss War Debt

BRITISH NOTE TO WASHINGTON

WHITE PAPER EXPLANATION

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1924, Revised, December 12, 1934 a.m.)

Washington, Dec. 11. The British Ambassador to-day handed to Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, a note from Great Britain explaining that His Majesty's Government would pay nothing on the War Debts account on December 15.

To make even a token payment would be useless, the note explained, and it would be unwise even to attempt negotiations. "But," the note added, "the Government will continue to watch for any effective opportunity for taking steps in the direction of negotiations."

The Finnish Minister notified the State Department that Finland would pay her semi-annual instalment on due on Saturday, amounting to $2,228,000.—United Press.

THE WHITE PAPER

London, Dec. 11. A White Paper issued this evening contains a Note from the United States Government to the British Government transmitting a statement of amounts due under the provisions of the 1923 funding agreement and the moratorium agreement of June 4, 1932, together with the British Government's reply thereto.

The American Note conveys an assurance that the United States Government is fully disposed to discuss, through diplomatic channels, any proposals which the British Government might desire to put forward with regard to the payment of this indebtedness, adding that such proposals would receive careful consideration with a view to eventual submission to the American Congress.

BRITISH REPLY

The British reply, dated December 10, after welcoming this assurance, states:—"In June last, His Majesty's Government explained the circumstances which had forced them to decide to suspend payments under the funding and moratorium agreements, pending a final revision of the war debt settlement. In that Note, it was stated that recent events had shown that discussions with a view to final revision of the settlement could not at that time usefully be renewed."

"His Majesty's Government have again most carefully reviewed the position, but they regret that they have reached the conclusion that the considerations which governed their decision six months ago apply with equal force to-day. Accordingly, they feel it would be useless, and therefore unwise, to initiate negotiations at present, but they will continue to watch for any effective opportunity of taking steps in that direction."—British Wireless.

CORRESPONDENCE

Hongkong's Aerial Future

The Editor, Hongkong Telegraph

Sir—I have read with much interest the article on the first page of Monday's issue of the Hongkong Telegraph regarding the fact that Hongkong is being left out of the itinerary of the newly proposed California-China Airway Service. I wish to compliment you on having brought this to the attention of the public and on your having urged the public of Hongkong to take prompt action in endeavouring to influence the Pan-American Airways to include Hongkong as a port-of-call.

The advantages to Hongkong are too numerous to mention, and it is quite obvious that with the many ocean-going connections from Hongkong to all parts of the world, a stop at Hongkong will be far more convenient to passengers than would a stop at Canton, where it would necessitate the passengers travelling by small boat or train to Hongkong to make their connections.

It may possibly be too late to induce the operators of the California-China Airway Service to include Hongkong as a port-of-call, but no effort should be spared by the commercial houses and general public of Hongkong to have Hongkong placed on the California-China Airway route.

T. B. WILSON.

Much social interest was displayed in the wedding which took place at St. Joseph's Church, Shanghai, between Mr. Goulet, V. M. D., of Hanoi, and Miss Daphne Alma Hutchison, daughter and step-daughter of Mrs. and Mr. C. M. Bain, well-known Shanghai residents. The bridal party are seen photographed above after the ceremony.

ANGLO-GERMAN TRADE PACT

DIFFICULTIES BEING REMOVED

London, Dec. 11. Asked in the Commons if the Anglo-German Trade Agreement was working satisfactorily, and if he was aware that exporters were finding it difficult to do trade with Germany, owing to the difficulty on the part of some German importers of obtaining import certificates, Colonel Colville, Secretary of the Overseas Trade Department, said it was the case that difficulties of the character referred to were experienced in connection with the early working of the agreement.

These points, however, had been taken up, as they arose, with the German authorities by the British Embassy at Berlin, and he understood that the arrangements were working on the whole satisfactorily. Colonel Colville, questioned about the Anglo-German payments agreement made on November 1, said that also was so far working satisfactorily, and that, including £400,000 paid when the agreement was signed, approximately £1,400,000 had now been made available by the German Government towards the liquidation of outstanding trade debts. Further sums would become available from time to time according to the terms of the agreement.—British Wireless.

PORTUGUESE BOY KIDNAPPED

TAKEN FROM HOME IN KOWLOON

Luigi Ribeiro, six-year old son of Mr. L. G. Ribeiro, a wealthy Portuguese, residing at No. 7, Hanoi Road, was kidnapped in sensational manner on Monday afternoon. Smart police work resulted in the recovery of the boy and the detention of two well-known Portuguese in connection with the crime.

The two arrested will be charged at the Kowloon Police Court. It appears that at 5.30 p.m. on Monday, a closed car drew up outside Mr. Ribeiro's home and two men entered. They spoke to the boy, took him out to the car, and disappeared. There was no one in the house at the time, and some alarm was felt when the occupants returned and found the boy missing.

Thinking the boy was playing with some friends, no action was taken for the time being, but when a note arrived, saying that the boy had been kidnapped, and demanding a large sum of money for his release, Mr. Ribeiro immediately got in touch with the police.

The note stated that contact with the kidnappers could be made at a well-known Chinese Hotel on the Hongkong side. Police officers rushed to the hotel and apprehended a man there.

Receiving certain information from him, they then proceeded to 183 Fuk Wing Street and found the boy, frightened but unhurt. He was immediately returned to his parents and another Portuguese who was obviously guarding him was arrested.

Altogether, the boy was absent from his home for eight hours.

While carrying out some work in the Peel Laboratory of the University, a coolie, Liu Cheung, fell off a ladder and received several injuries. He was sent to the Government Civil Hospital for treatment.

The latest victim of the evil spell which reigns over Hongkong's aerodrome, Lt. Edward Dorsey, the 23 years old stunt ace of the famous March Field's 73rd Pursuit Squadron, crashed to death before a thousand horrified spectators.

UNUSUAL CASE

CONCEALING BIRTH OF CHILD

An unusual case came before Mr. Thomson at the Central Police Court this morning, when Chiu Heung-tai, 44, described as a married woman, was charged with concealing the birth of a child.

The proceedings were the sequel to the discovery of the remains of a newborn child at 566 Queen's Road West, on Monday morning. The defendant, who is under medical observation, was not in Court.

A week's remand for further police inquiries was given. The case has been instituted under the Ordinance dealing with Offences Against the Person. Human bones were found by the ground floor inmates of No. 566 Queen's Road West, forced down a drain, and the gruesome discovery being communicated to the police, investigations led to the detention of a woman, the defendant in the case, who was living on an upper floor.

ADMINISTRATIVE CHANGES

REMAKING WORLD'S GREAT CITIES

sixteen business calls in New York in the same time as three in London, because vertical travel is many times faster than horizontal, and because the professions and varying types of business are more closely segregated. If, however, we are to tackle our towns in anything like the way the King suggests, the central authority must greatly increase its staff of architects, and see that it employs for this planning and thinking young trained men with the imagination to tackle these vast but exciting problems. This is not a job for old men.

6 CYLINDERS

NO MORE NO LESS

With more, you sacrifice economy—

With less, you sacrifice smoothness.

Depend on CHEVROLET for the right answer to the question of cylinders in a low-priced car: SIX CYLINDERS. No More, No Less."

And Chevrolet is backed up in its judgment by selling almost as many cars as her two closest competitors combined.

WHY SUCH DECIDED PREFERENCE?

Chevrolet knows that unless a low-priced car has 6 cylinders, the owner must sacrifice either SMOOTHNESS or ECONOMY.

Insist on a CHEVROLET SIX.

Cambridge Overwhelm Oxford

Annual Rugged Match At Twickenham

London, Dec. 11. Forty-five thousand spectators, crowding the Twickenham ground to-day, saw Cambridge overwhelm Oxford by 29 points to 14 in the annual Rugged match between the two great Universities. At half time the score was Cambridge 6, Oxford 4. The usual animated scenes were witnessed.

The ground was in good condition, the turf yielding from the effect of the recent rains.

Cambridge kicked off against a strong wind. The Oxford forward rush was repulsed by Cambridge, whose forwards dribbled the ball down field. Then came a spell of midfield play, with the usual fierce tackling by each side.

CAMBRIDGE SCORES

Cambridge opened the scoring. The forwards heeled slowly and the ball went to Browning. Cliff Jones and Weoller, who handled in turn and then passed to Pye, who streaked for the line and hurried himself over to score. Cambridge failed to convert.

Oxford replied when Bush took possession from the scrum half and brought off a beautiful drop kick from outside the Cambridge twenty-five.

Cambridge pressed hotly and after a rare fight, Oxford was penalised on their own twenty-five. Just before the interval, Parker scored a penalty goal.

Cambridge was definitely on top after the resumption and the Oxford defence crumbled in the face of repeated rushes in which Pye, on the wing and Crammer were outstanding.

Long and accurate kicking saved the situation but Cambridge continued to pile on points.

Pye scored but failed to convert. Jones then dropped one beautifully between the posts. Parker converted another try and Pye after a dogged burst, went over for Parker to convert. Immediately afterwards, Weoller brought off a wonderful drop goal from almost half way. Johnson completed the scoring with an unconverted try at the last minute.

The teams were: Oxford—Grieve, Warr, Lorraine (Capt.), Crammer, Rees-Jones, Bush, Guy, McGrath, Nicholson, Bennett, Bowers, Wray, Cooper, Hoxham and James.

Cambridge.—Parker, Johnston, Candler, Wooller, Pye, Jones, Brown, Leather (Capt.), Bowman, Lord, Rees, Laborde, Murray, Braithwaite, Dinwiddie.—Reuter.

Derby County's Bold Move

$3,000 For Gallacher's Transfer

Derby County made a bold move in obtaining the transfer of Hugh Gallacher, the Chelsea and Scottish international centre forward. Negotiations between the clubs took four days, and it then became a question of whether Gallacher would go to Derby.

A year ago he had refused to join Everton. The question was put to him and he took several hours to consider it.

Chelsea were frankly surprised when he said he was willing to sign for the County. He was married a short time ago, and it is believed his wife influenced him in his decision. Gallacher was obtained by Chelsea from Newcastle United at a cost of £10,000, and this is his fourth season with the club. It was understood that Everton offered £4,000 for his transfer last season, Derby have paid £3,000.

URGENT NEED

The County required another centre forward urgently. Bowers has had a cartilage removed from his knee. A player usually needs about three months to recover from the operation, and the club's season, which had started so promisingly, was in danger for the want of an experienced forward.

It is not easy to imagine Gallacher as the Derby centre forward. He is of an entirely different type from Bowers, being about six inches shorter, and some adjustment of methods may be necessary. But Mr. George Jobey should find a way of making him a big success.

PETERSEN TO MEET COOK

TITLE FIGHT FIXED FOR DEC. 17

Jack Petersen, British and Empire heavy-weight champion, will definitely defend his titles against George Cook, the Australian, at the Albert Hall on Dec. 17.

There was a suggestion that the date should be altered owing to the fact that on the 17th Mr. Seymour Hicks is to stage a theatrical matinee at which the King and Queen will be present and at which Petersen was invited to do some exhibition boxing.

Unfortunately, Mr. Jeff Dickson, the boxing promoter, could not very well alter his original arrangements for the contest. If he brought the match forward it might clash with a tournament and championship match at Wembley on December 7. So Petersen will meet Cook on the 17th, but arrangements will probably be made whereby he can accept the matinee invitation.

TO INCLUDE BRITAIN, EUROPEAN COUNTRIES AND AMERICA

TO BE RUN ON DAVIS CUP LINES

London, Dec. 7.

An international association football competition on Davis Cup lines is being planned.

At first it would include only British and most of the European countries. Eventually, South America, the United States and other countries might be brought in.

The plan is being devised by European football legislators who are understood to have talked it over with the British officials when they attended the England v. Italy match in London, on November 14.

A rough outline of the plan is that there should be four zones, Great Britain, northern, middle and southern Europe. Each zone would hold its own knock-out competition; and there would follow inter-zone semi-finals and a final.

In future years the holders of the championship would compete only in the challenge round, as is the case in the Davis Cup Competition.

For some time, the continental countries have been eager to include the British teams in a competitive tournament. They feel that the time has come when matches between European national teams and England, Scotland, Wales or Ireland should not be confined to friendly matches, often played out of season.

They claim that the suggested competition would be certain of financial success, and could either replace the present British international competition, or be run separately.

Tavel would be reduced to a minimum by the introduction of zones, and matches could be played in mid-week. To prevent the competition from going on too long, because of the replaying of drawn games, such games could be decided on corner-kicks. The team forcing the greatest number of corners would be the winners of the match.

The match between England and Italy will add force to the arguments of the proponents of the plan, because it is regarded as the unofficial championship of the world. Italy are European and world champions as the result of competitions this year in which British teams did not compete. To beat the country where football originated would make them undisputedly supreme.

MANY DIFFICULTIES

There are many difficulties in the way of the scheme. The principal one is the difference between the British and European codes. The former allows "charging," the latter does not. Up to the present, practically every international match between a continental team and one of the four British national teams has been followed by excuses on the part of one or the other, concerning unfamiliar conditions, state of grounds, refereeing, and the like.

So far as the British teams are concerned, one of the chief difficulties would be the release of players by the League clubs at a time when teams would be struggling for League points, and when the absence of one or two star players might make all the difference between safety and relegation.—United Press.

PROFESSIONAL TENNIS PLAYERS' PLANS

TILDEN'S SCHEME FOR RAPPROCHEMENT

At a luncheon given in London last month W. T. Tilden outlined a scheme which, if it is brought into operation, will revolutionise the conditions and outlook of competitive lawn tennis.

Tilden announced that, as a result of long interviews with M. Pierre Gillon, the President of the French Lawn Tennis Federation, it was proposed to form an international Players' Association for the purpose of developing international, national, and sectional championships, which they trusted would meet the desires of the international amateur body.

OBJECTIONS REMOVED

The objections of the national amateur associations to what Tilden termed the "barnstorming" element would thus be removed, and, with recognitions and sanctions from these bodies, professional and amateur lawn tennis could go hand in hand, and the carrying on of professionalism would be constructive for the good of the game.

Details of the scheme envisaged the holding of four championship meetings each year, one each in England, France, Germany, and the United States, one of which would be a world championship with the venue allocated in rotation. A cup has been presented by M. Bonndel, which is intended to be the "Davis Cup" of professional lawn tennis, and the U.S.A., Germany, France and Ireland are already going to challenge, while it is hoped that England and Czechoslovakia will also be there.

Tilden's proposals, if carried into effect, will merit the most careful consideration of amateur governing bodies, and they certainly tend, as he claimed, to clarify the situation and remove differences which were based on errors and misconceptions between the two groups.

SATURDAY'S BOXING

COLONY CHAMPION CONTESTANTS

The stage is all set now for the first boxing programme of the season which is to take place at the Lee Theatre on Saturday night.

As previously announced, the principal fight of the evening will be that between Stoker Pryall (H.M.S. Suffolk) and Stoker Dee (H.M.S. Phoenix). Both men have had considerable experience in the ring, and their contest on Saturday is to decide the Lightweight Championship of the Colony.

Stoker Pryall has fought 150 professional bouts and has never been knocked out. Recently he won two fights against well-known professionals in Australia and also holds the Lightweight Championship of the West Indies.

The THIRTEENTH EXTRA RACE MEETING will be held (Weather permitting) at HAPPY VALLEY on Saturday, 15th December, 1934, commencing at 2.00 p.m.

The First Bell will be rung at 1.30 p.m.

By Order,

C. B. BROWN,

Secretary.

Hongkong, 10th December, 1934.

Stoker Dee has figured in many fights in the West of England, and is the present holder of the Fly and Bantam-weight Championships of Cornwall. In addition he is holder of the Prince of Wales Belt competed for in the Duchy of Cornwall. He has been in more than 150 fights since taking up boxing.

Battling Chan, who is at present at the Flying Training School at Kai Tak, was holder of the Bantam-weight Championship of North Malaya, and his fight with Corporal Marsden promises some excellent boxing. Marsden holds one of the best records for his weight in the Far East, and won a reputation for himself when he drew with Frankie Ash just before the latter fought for the World Championship.

Signalman Reid (H.M.S. Keppel) who is to fight A. B. Prandy (H.M.S. Kent) in a 6-round Middleweight contest is a sparkling fighter, and the battle should be one of the tit-bits of the evening.

Cpl. Fitzgerald (H.M.S. Medway) and Stoker Armitage (H.M.S. Sandwich) are to fight over 6 rounds (Middleweight). They are a well-matched pair and should both give a good account of themselves. The fight is expected to go the full distance.

A. B. Parker (H.M.S. Medway), who is fighting A. B. Appleby (H.M.S. Pandora), in a 6-round Welterweight contest, has a reputation locally as a rugged fighter and is very popular with local fans. He has put up some exceptionally good performances in the past.

The other contest will be between A. B. Wingrave (H.M.S. Phoenix) and A. B. Fancy (H.M.S. Medway) in a 6-round Welterweight contest.

Canton Tennis Championship

LAI KWONG-TSUN BEATS GEORGE BODIKER

Canton, Dec. 10. George Bodiker was beaten by Lai Kwong-tsun in three straight sets in the final of the International Lawn Tennis Club Singles Championship of Canton played at the Yuet Sai Tennis Club, Tungshan, yesterday.

The match, which drew a large number of keen tennis fans, was played under ideal weather conditions although the arrangements regarding the courts and their unfortunate situation close to the traffic lines somewhat upset the concentration of the players.

Bodiker appeared slightly off form on the hard court surface, probably due to his match against Watson the previous day on grass, and as a result did not hit his drives with his usual crispness and confidence. Lai Kwong-tsun on the other hand was playing better tennis than he has shown here for a long time and fought hard for every point earned.

On several occasions Bodiker had Lai chasing from side to side and was returning beautifully, but often when it looked as though Lai must lose the point, Bodiker would not let play out when in a safe position to play an easy winner.

HIGH STANDARD

In spite of these little failings, the standard of tennis was high and the points very keenly contested throughout the match. However, after a hard fought tussle Lai Kwong-tsun prevailed in three straight sets by 7/5, 8/6, 6/3, and deserved his victory on the day's play. Mr. C. E. Watson officiated as umpire.

On Saturday the final of the open doubles was played and was won in four sets by Lau Fook-ling and Chan Chi-keung over Lai Kwong-tsun and Leung Tak-ki. The winners showed far superior combination and fairly outplayed their opponents.

After the singles match yesterday, Mrs. Kanter presented the trophies.—Our Own Correspondent.

CAMBRIDGE TEAM BUILDING

Captain of Cambridge Rugby W. J. Leather has awarded Blues to P. R. Bowring (Rugby and Trinity) and P. L. Candler (Sherborne and Pembroke).

Bowring is a rather small but very hard-working forward who has been in the running for a Blue for at least two years. Last season he was most unfortunate enough to get injured at a critical period of the term.

Candler is really a fly-half, but Cliff Jones secured that position over his head last season and he has now developed into a splendid centre three-quarter.

On resumption after the interval, C. Pile went through to give Hongkong the lead. Kowloon retaliated and found the net through Parker. Towards the end, Pile sent the ball into the net but the point was disallowed for an infringement and the final result was a draw.

The Y.M.C.A. who turned up with an extra man, loaned two players to the visitors.

TUNGSHAN GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

LAFFOND DEFEATS ANNETT BY 4 AND 3

Canton, Dec. 10. The final of the Tungshan Recreation Club Championship was played over 36 holes yesterday between Messrs. Annett and Laffond, the latter proving the victor after a keenly contested game. It was anybody's game until the 27th when Annett appeared to lose that steadiness which up to that time had made the match so evenly contested. Laffond gained the honour by the margin of 4 and 3.

The annual game between Tungshan Recreation Club's "Best Ladies" and the "Worst Men" was held over 27 holes yesterday.

In the morning, 9 holes Match play was contested, and the men were severely trounced to the tune of 5 1/2 points to 2 1/2. After lunch, "Shanghai Foursomes" were "played" over 18 holes. The Ladies again displayed their superiority, "defeating" their opponents with three victories to one.

CIVIL ENGINEERING?

JAPANESE REPLY TO CHARGES OF AERODROME-BUILDING

Tientsin, Dec. 11.

Mr. Chang Ting-yo, Mayor of Tientsin, has lodged a protest with General Umetau, Commander of the Japanese Garrison Forces in North China, against the alleged construction of an aerodrome at Nankai, Tientsin, by the Japanese military authorities.

According to a general Chinese version, work on the aerodrome has been in progress for a long time, and it is now completed. It is also said that the aerodrome is capable of accommodating twenty-five planes and, in it, an oil tank has been built.

However, the Japanese have repeatedly denied the allegation and declared that the supposed aerodrome construction in the quarter in question at Nankai was merely a piece of civil engineering work undertaken by a private Japanese concern—Central News Agency.

BRITAIN PLEASED

BALKAN CRISIS AT AN END

London, Dec. 11.

The success of the conciliatory efforts at Geneva is warmly welcomed by the British Press and satisfaction is expressed that the British delegate played an important part in the negotiations leading up to a solution of the immediate deadlock.

In presenting the resolution to the Council Mr. Eden said it must be observed that the Council was not a Court of Justice. It had no means of undertaking judicial enquiries. Its function was to assist parties in establishing political relations, desirable between members of the League. In concluding his brief speech, Mr. Eden said the Council had in the past often appealed to the wisdom and spirit of conciliation of governments which had reposed confidence in the League. None of these governments would think that he exceeded his right as Rapporteur. He expressed a sincere hope for good understanding, which should exist between the parties to this dispute, and expressed his confidence that they would avoid anything which might be of a nature to compromise it. —British Wireless.

BRITAIN'S HELP

CHINESE ECONOMIC MISSION

London, Dec. 11.

The Chinese Minister to London (Mr. Quo Tai-chi) gave a luncheon party to-day in honour of Mr. Yu Fei-peng (leader of the Chinese Economic Mission to Europe), General Shu Zing-yao (leader of the Mission's military section), and General Hsiao Tang-chiu (head of the aviation section). Other leading members of the Mission were also present.

The guests included Lord Londonderry (Secretary of State for Air), Lord Hailsham (Secretary of State for War), Lord Strathcona, Mr. Hore Belisha (Minister for Transport), Sir Victor Wellesley, and Mr. D. G. M. Bernard (Chairman of the China Association).

Mr. Quo Tai-chi warmly thanked members of the British Cabinet present for the kind way in which they had received the Mission, and for their friendly help. The Mission was making a more extended study of England than of any other country. This was evidence of Chinese friendship and trust in England, which, plainly, was warmly reciprocated.

He was gratified to note that the Chinese situation was being closely watched and increasingly understood in England. This was evident from articles in the Press and remarks in Parliament.

A dozen years ago, said the Chinese Minister, British and American statesmanship had collaborated at Washington to give treaty force to their conviction that a strong and united China was the best guarantee of peace and prosperity in the Far East.

The Chinese National Government was steadfastly pursuing a reconstruction programme, extending its authority over the vast area of the Chinese Republic, while the whole world's need of equitable markets was greater than ever.

The urgent requirement of both China and the world was a reaffirmation of the inviolability of the twin principles of Chinese integrity and equal opportunity for all nations to trade with China, as embodied in the Nine Power Treaty.

The time seemed to be at hand, said Mr. Quo, for British and American statesmen to take the lead in supporting the principles established in 1922 at Washington.

Lord Hailsham's Reply

Lord Hailsham made a most friendly and sympathetic reply, without touching on the diplomatic issues raised in Mr. Quo Tai-chi's speech.

He warmly admired what the Chinese Government was doing and expressed pleasure at meeting the members of the Chinese mission. He hoped they would obtain everything they desired.—Reuter.

SERIAL STORY

The Clue Of The Forgotten Murder:

By CARLETON KENDRAKE

CHAPTER XXXI

Griff told the cab driver to wait and he and Bleeker approached the house, a house which had at one time been a pretentious private residence but was now given over to furnished rooms.

"Shall we," Bleeker asked as they entered the door, "get the landlady and inquire for Blanche Stanway?"

"I doubt," Griff told him, "if it's necessary."

He led the way up one flight of stairs, paused to listen in the hallway.

The sound of swift, excited voices came from a room toward the rear. Griff nodded toward that room. "I think," he said, "that what we want is in there."

He walked noiselessly down the corridor, paused before a closed door. On the other side of that door a woman was talking. Her voice was audible, but not her words. Griff placed his hand on the knob, turned it noiselessly, shoved the door open.

A fleshy woman with hard, green eyes and stringy, lack-lustre hair which had been cut in a square bob was seated on a chair, a mocking smile playing about her lips.

Standing near the window, clad in black, was Mrs. Frank Cathay. Her face was white and tragic. There was a haunted look of hopeless defeat in her eyes.

Nearer the doorway, standing with his side to the door, his big shoulders squared, his face flushed with rage, was Carl Racine, the detective.

Griff's voice was cheerful. "Do we intrude?" he asked.

"They stared at him. Mrs. Cathay's face showed bewilderment. Racine's face was white with cold anger. The woman who was seated in the chair shifted her hard, green eyes to regard the visitors with a curiosity which seemed almost cynical."

"We want very much," Griff went on, "to interview Mrs. Blanche Stanway, or perhaps she might prefer to be called Mrs. Blanche Malone."

The smile faded from the lips of the woman.

"I don't know any Blanche Malone," she said. "My name is Blanche Stanway. Tell me what you want."

"You," Racine said to Griff in a voice that quivered with rage, "can wait in the corridor until we get done talking. This is none of your damn business!"

Griff smiled serenely. "Racine," he said, "you are a man who knows the law. Perhaps you also know the penalty for jolting a lady."

"Try and put us out," he snapped. Sidney Griff spoke in tones that were calmly suave.

"It happens," he said, "that Mr. Bleeker represents The Blade. It also happens that The Blade is interested in this interview, as doubtless the police will be."

Racine glowered at Bleeker, his manner truculent, but his eyes suddenly shifted to those of the criminologist as Griff finished speaking.

Mrs. Cathay, white-lipped, her nostrils dilated, regarded Griff with eyes that were dark with emotion.

"I presume," she said, "you want me to beg and cringe. I won't do it."

"How," asked Racine, "did you find out about this?"

Griff smiled at him. "You find out about it?" he countered.

Mrs. Cathay whirled to the hard-faced woman who sat in the chair, regarding them with glittering appraisal.

"If you talk," she said, "you're not going to get your own way any good. Griff swung to her instantly.

"If you don't talk," he said, "you're going to put yourself in a very questionable position."

The woman laughed. Her laugh was harsh, rasping and discordant.

"My, my," she said, "how important I seem to be getting all of a sudden! Well, I'm not going to talk—not because she told me not to, and the woman spat out the feminine pronoun with a bitter, scornful emphasis."

to her previous success, however great. Freddie March gives Robert Browning the dash and fire that is in his manner. With Norma Shearer he plays three of the most exquisite love scenes ever to be recorded by the motion picture camera. Charles Laughton does the tyrannical father with a terrific restrained power. So thoroughly does he dominate proceedings that it is with difficulty the audience avoids demonstrations against his characterization. These are your three stars, strong enough to ensue the success of any picture, stronger still by such inspired casting. Nor does the perfect casting end with the stars—Everyone in the supporting cast has been rightly chosen. Directed by Sidney Franklin, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" stands out as a distinguished achievement in any screen year.

"Death on the Diamond" gripping detective mystery dealing with weird killings in a baseball team during a pennant season, opens to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre in conjunction with the Rhapsody Girls' Revue. Written by Corliss Fitzgerald, author of "70,000 Witnesses", and filmed with the co-operation of the St. Louis Cardinals, the picture is a unique blend of actual baseball, thrills, mystery, and uproarious comedy, directed by Edward Sedgwick, noted for his sports pictures of the past. The shooting of a play, stealing second, before 80,000 screaming fans, weird attacks in the clubhouse, and other fantastic detail is lightened by comedy situations and a love story in which Robert Young and Madge Evans figure as the two principals. The cast includes C. Henry Gordon, David Landau, Pat Pendleton, Ted Healy, Edward Brophy, James Ellison, Pat Flaherty, Pat O'Malley, Joe Sauers and others. Adapted to the screen by Harvey Thew and Joe Sherman, the picture was dialogued by Ralph Spence. Actual quarters of the Cardinals were used as a "Location", and material assistance was given in making the picture by the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago Cubs. Amid the romance, comedy and baseball thrills, runs a detective story in which suspicion falls on nearly thirty characters, before, in the final scene in the picture, the mystery is suddenly solved by a dramatic twist.

"The Barretts of Wimpole Street", the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture now showing at the Queen's Theatre, is, in every sense of the word, a magnificent triumph for all concerned. Norma Shearer as Elizabeth Barrett now stands unchallenged as the First Lady of the Screen. Here is a performance so sensitive, so sincere that it brooks no comparison phases, "but because I'm going to get a lawyer to do my talking for me."

"Who," asked Griff, "is your lawyer?"

"I don't know," she said. "I'm going to get one."

"The police," said Griff, "may not care what I was doing, if you want to know something about this."

"The police," she retorted calmly, "can keep on waiting."

"I'm going to ask you just once more," Mrs. Cathay said, "to consider my position."

The woman's eyes swept Mrs. Cathay in hostile appraisal.

"You went to a lot of trouble to find me, didn't you?" she said. "Just because you thought I could do you some good. How about the long years before? You didn't take any trouble to find me then? You didn't care what I was doing, if you want to know, I was scrubbing floors in office buildings. Think of that! Down on my hands and knees. Crawling around, scrubbing floors, cleaning spittoons, my hands in dirty soap suds, scrubbing, scrubbing, scrubbing! Always scrubbing! While you were powdered and perfumed, painted and manicured, riding around with a chauffeur in a shiny automobile, reclining on soft cushions, having maids to do your hair and keep your face beautiful."

She broke off abruptly and once more gave that harsh, scornful laugh. "I will say this," she said, "the world has handed me enough knocks. I know enough now to look out for myself and I'm going to look out for myself."

"Will you," asked Griff, "make any statement?"

"My statement," she said, "will be made through my attorney."

Griff turned to Bleeker and shrugged his shoulders.

Mrs. Cathay's eyes watched the criminologist with stark terror appearing in their depths.

"Will you," she asked, "please consider my side of this case?"

Racine spoke to her in a rumbling monotone.

"They're newspaper men," he said. "Don't talk to them."

She bit her lip and was silent.

Racine crossed to Mrs. Cathay, took her by the arm and piloted her toward the door.

"Remember," he said, "we've got other places to go and other things to do."

"You won't find her!" shrieked the woman, who remained seated in the chair by the window. "Go ahead and try all you want to—you can't find her."

"If," said Griff in calm tones, "you're referring to the girl who is variously known as Esther Ordway or as Alice Lorton, the girl who was the daughter of Frank B. Cathay, you will find that she was registered at the Elite Apartments, number 319 Robinson Street."

Mrs. Cathay stared at him, her eyes wide.

The woman who had been seated by the window jumped to her feet. Her face was livid with fury. Her scarred hands were clenched into fists.

"Damn you!" she said.

"And," went on Griff, his eyes fastened upon the face of Mrs. Cathay, "if you want to see her, you'll find that she isn't in her apartment."

"You'll need a pass from the police if you're going to visit her. At the present moment she's at police headquarters where she's booked on suspicion of murdering Charles Morden, a reporter for The Blade."

(To Be Continued).

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solution to Previous

Contract Problem

By W. E. McKenney

There is no such a thing as a perfect bidding system. That's the thrilling part about contract. You never can figure it out.

You can take the best players, playing for high stakes, where they know it does not pay to over-bid their hands; occasionally they will take them for a terrific set. Many think that the experts never go down a thousand points. But that is why contract is so interesting—no person or system can account for freakish distribution.

I was sitting in a restaurant in New York the other night, after a tournament, and there was a crowd of bridge players gathered around the table discussing unusual happenings and unusual holdings.
One of the players, who has a good reputation as a money player, told about the following hand in the declarer's hand and asked if we didn't think it would be hard luck if a four spade contract were defeated with this holding. He agreed that there was a possibility of the hand being defeated a trick or two, so he did not redouble, but he thought he was justified in complaining of hard luck when the hand was defeated 2,000 points.

West opened the four of hearts.
The declarer felt pleased with the first play, as he made a good guess —he put on the Jack and East won with the ace. East returned the queen of diamonds, South played the king and West ruffed.

West's next play was a small club. Declarer thought he'd try to steal a trick, so he went up with the king in dummy and East won with the ace, returning the Jack of diamonds on which South played the ace. West ruffed with the three of spades. The queen of clubs was West's next play and the declarer trumped with the four of spades.

Today's Contract Problem

East is playing the contract at four hearts, redoubled.
West having opened the bidding with one spade and North having made a vulnerable overcall of two clubs.
Can the hand be made, and can you give the logical reasoning for the play?

JUMPED TO DEATH

CHINESE REDUCED TO ABJECT TERROR

A verdict of manslaughter against So Sing, So Ping and San Kin-luk was returned at the conclusion of the Coroner's inquiry, conducted by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday afternoon, into the death of Wong Pak-kin, alias Wong Cheuk-lam, who met his death by a fall from the verandah of the third floor of No. 167 Des Voeux Road Central, on September 9.

The jury comprised Messrs. H. J. Fountain (Foreman), F. E. Silva and W. E. Broadbridge.

Lui King, aged 15 years, who was employed as a "boy" at the Wing Sing Yuen firm, Des Voeux Road Central, the master of which was So Sing, said that on the evening of September 9 about eight or nine persons came for dinner. After dinner they left, and about 9 p.m. there were on the floor So Sing, So Ping, Chan Kin-luk and the deceased. At dinner they drank some wine, more than usual. The deceased was in the back cubicle, and So Sing called him out to the accountant's room. He heard So Sing accuse the deceased of having caused something about the firm to be published in the papers, and so bring the firm into bad repute. The deceased denied this. So Sing then took two nails in his hand and struck deceased, cutting his forehead. So Sing called to So Ping for assistance, and So Ping also helped to strike the deceased with his fist. Chan Kin-luk also struck the deceased. So Ping said, "We must not allow you to leave to-night," and deceased replied he would then stay.

Asked for a Chopper.

Witness said that So Sing then asked him to get a chopper, but witness refused. The struggle went on from the passage to the front room, and he heard deceased cry out once, "Save life!" The deceased then broke free from his assailants, and ran out to the verandah. So Ping and Chan Kin-luk then ran away through the back house to the roof. The deceased climbed over and jumped from the verandah into the street. After he had jumped over, So Sing went to the verandah.

looked over, and then ran after the others to the roof.

In reply to the foreman of the jury, witness said that nobody had pushed the deceased over.

Sergeant Meadows, recalled, said that when he went to the premises on September 10 he found the usual books of a business firm and a mass of papers. The books appeared to be very old, yet some bore no entries, and others bore entries on one page only.

Coroner Sums Up.

Summing up, Mr. Schofield said the evidence showed that deceased was not pushed over, but had jumped over himself. The evidence also showed that deceased was no doubt in a state of terror. The question was whether the fight was started intentionally and by whom. From the evidence, it appeared to have been started by So Sing. None of the actions of So Sing and the two others, however, indicated more than an intention to assault the deceased. Even calling for the chopper was hardly an intent to murder. There also seemed to be no special preparations made for flight, and it looked almost as if they were taken by surprise at what had happened, and run away.

"This case," said Mr. Schofield, "is clearly one in which a man was subjected to unlawful violence and thereby reduced to such a state of fear that in order to escape he took his own life. The law on this subject is laid down in the case of The King v. Evans, in which a man bent his wife, and she threw herself out of the window and was killed. He was held answerable for the consequences as much as though he had thrown her out himself. Frightening a person to death seems to be manslaughter at the least. If, therefore, you find these facts, then a verdict of wilful murder against So Sing would be justified, but if you find that the deceased had no special grounds to think his life was in danger, then you might bring in a verdict of manslaughter. I do not think the evidence justifies suicide only."

The jury retired, and after ten minutes brought in the verdict of manslaughter.

Mr. M. Bernha arrived back in the Colony on Monday by the s.s. President Cleveland from a business trip to North China.

PLENARY SESSION

SOUTH-WEST DELEGATES WELCOMED AT NANKING

Nanking, Dec. 11.

A warm welcome to the six South-west leaders was expressed by Mr. Wang Ching-wai, who presided at this morning's meeting of the Kuomintang plenary session.

The meeting was chiefly devoted to hearing the report of the Standing Committee of the C.E.C., which dealt with the cardinal events during the ten months since the Fourth Session.

The session decided to refer the Report to the Committee of Party Affairs for examination. It then elected a Committee of 45, including Mr. Lin Sen (President of the Central Political Council), Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, Mr. Wang Ching-wai (Chairman of the Executive Yuan), Mr. Sun Fo (Chairman of the Legislative Yuan) and Mr. T. V. Soong (former Finance Minister) to study the new draft constitution.

Draft Constitution Discussed

Nanking, Dec. 11.

The Plenary Session of the C.E.C. of the Kuomintang started discussion of the draft Constitution of the Chinese Republic this morning. After the full text of the draft Constitution was read by the Secretary-General, a debate was held for an hour or so. It was finally resolved that the draft Constitution be referred to a special committee for examination.

It was generally agreed that the draft Constitution now only reached the stage of discussion within Kuomintang circles and that efforts had to be made at rallying the support of the people, to bring it into realization as the permanent Constitution of the Republic of China.—Central News Agency.

Ministers Resign

Nanking, Dec. 11.

On the plea of being pre-occupied with his duties as President of the Judiciary Yuan, Mr. Chu Ching has tendered his resignation from his concurrent post of Minister of Justice.

Following his example, Mr. Shieh Kuen-shang, Administrative Permanent Secretary of the Ministry of Justice, has also tendered his resignation.

The National Government Council has accepted their resignations.—Central News Agency.

LORD CHIEF JUSTICE ASSAILS GOVERNMENT

UPPER HOUSE ELECTRIFIED

"ODIOUS FEATURES" OF SUPREME COURT BILL "I WILL FIGHT IT WORD BY WORD"

London, Dec. 11.
A sensational outburst by Lord Chief Justice Hewart electrified the normally calm atmosphere of the House of Lords last night when he attacked the Lord Chancellor on the Supreme Court Judicature Amendment Bill, which provides for an additional two judges for the King's Bench Division and for the appointment of a Vice-President of the Court of Appeal from the existing Lords Justices without regard to their seniority.

After Lord Sankey had moved the second reading, the Lord Chief Justice complained that in his official capacity as Lord Chief Justice of England he was not shown the draft Bill nor had he been consulted beforehand on the terms of the reference and the personnel of the Royal Commission, appointed behind his back, to investigate the congestion in the King's Bench Division.

Regarding the clause of the Bill appointing a Vice-President of the Court of Appeal, the Lord Chief Justice suggested that this was an affront to Lord Justice Slesser (former Labour Solicitor-General) on account of his political views.

The Lord Chief Justice concluded that the Bill was a disgraceful measure, unfair to Bench and Bar and public.

"If its odious features are not removed I shall adjourn my court every day during the Committee stage of the Bill in order to attend the House of Lords and fight the obnoxious features, not clause by clause, but line by line, and word by word," declared the Lord Chief Justice.

When he had ceased speaking, the House of Lords immediately adjourned.—Reuter.

EVIDENCE OF TRAGEDY

WRECKAGE OF CHINESE SHIP

Shanghai, Dec. 12.
Several lifeboats and lifebelts with the name "S.S. Taishan" on them, as well as other wreckage, were sighted by Chinese vessels in the vicinity of Lianyungang harbour to-day.

The Taishan vanished in a gale on December 4 and H.M.S. Bridgewater, which went to hunt for her, found only bodies of men thought to have belonged to her crew. One more body has now been found by a.s. Hatchow, and it is recognised that there can no longer be any hope held out that any of the crew of 45 survived.—Reuter.

RIGHTS OF PILOTAGE

Nanking, Dec. 12.
It is learned in Nanking Foreign Office circles that informal negotiations have been in progress for some time with the interested Powers for the resumption of the right of pilotage and that negotiations have reached an advanced stage. According to a Foreign Office official, Britain and the United States have shown tendencies of compromise in respect of this matter, while Japan is still adamant.—Central News.

OSTEOPATHS' BILL

London, Dec. 11.
The House of Lords carried Lord Ellbank's Bill for the registration and regulation of osteopaths. The vote was 35 to 20 against the Government's opposition. Lord Ellbank explained that the object of the measure was to remove disabilities attending the work of genuine osteopaths.—Reuter.

AIRWAYS TO RESUME

Shanghai-Canton Services

Shanghai, Dec. 12.

The China National Airways bi-weekly passenger service between Shanghai and Canton will be resumed to-day, it was announced to-day.

The Communications Ministry has appropriated $250,000 for the Airways trial flights between Shanghai and Yunnan points. These trials will be made next spring.—Reuter.

Overhaul of Films Act Foreshadowed

SAFETY RULES

A complete overhaul of the Films Act, especially in regard to safety regulations, will be made in the present Parliamentary session, it is stated.

Draft regulations are already drawn up, awaiting the signature of the Home Secretary. It is said, and these, if sanctioned, will be submitted to the House for approval.

One of the most vital effects of the new legislation will be to put sub-standard film stock under stricter control and to bring it virtually under the same restrictions as standard film.

Approach was made some time ago to the Home Office by the County Councils' Association, and these new regulations are the sequel. They asked for an evening up of the law regarding non-flam and ordinary film.

The new regulations which are awaiting the Home Secretary's signature take especial regard of fast burning and slow burning film.

It is probably that the Governmental decision will be that there is in fact no such thing as non-flam film.

The net result of the new regulations will, of course, be to give Councils wider powers in regard to sub-standard and non-flam films shows. The law will, as demanded by the County Councils, be "evened up."

SHAKESPEARE PLAYS

Max Reinhardt, the German theatre producer, whose work on "The Miracle" is in recent memory of London audiences, has signed a long-term contract to make films for Warner Brothers.

Max Reinhardt, who is now in California, will devote himself to the production of classics for the screen, and as at present arranged (says Reuters) these will consist for the most part of Shakespeare's plays. Work on "A Midsummer Night's Dream," with Mendelssohn's music, was begun in November.

Max Reinhardt, who is a former director of the Josefstadt Theatre in Vienna and of the Grosses Schauspielhaus in Berlin, relinquished his appointments in Germany following the anti-Jewish campaign of the Nazis.

GREATEST VAMPS

Greta Garbo is one of the six greatest vamps now acting for the screen, according to a list drawn up in San Francisco by Theda Bara, who, in the days of silent films, was acclaimed to be the world's greatest vamp.

The five other stars she has selected are—Marlene Dietrich, Katharine Hepburn, Mae West, Jean Harlow, and Alice White.

RECRUIT FOR THE FILMS

Miss Penelope Dudley Ward, elder daughter of Mrs. Dudley Ward, has become a film actress. She has been given the part of a lady of the Court in "The Dictator," the production starring Clive Brook and Madeline Carroll.

She is regarded by film experts as having great possibilities, and six months ago it was suggested that she might play a leading part opposite Emil Jannings.

Miss Ward, who speaks French and German fluently, is only 19.

MARLENE'S NEXT

"Caprice Espagnole" will be Marlene Dietrich's next starring picture for Paramount. It will be directed by Josef von Sternberg, and definitely replaces "Lady of the Lions," "Lorelei" and "Red

EVENING GOWN

Carried Out in Deep Blue Net

FLARED SKIRT

"Borrowing Special Features." A style which would suit the fair-haired, petite woman who dances a good deal, has a swathed bodice careening the figure and a skirt draped gracefully over the hips and flowing out towards the hem. It is of deep ink blue net, with narrow bands of paillettes.

APPLE SANDWICHES

SPRINKLE some buttered slices of brown bread with Demerara sugar. Peel some eating apples, cut them into fairly thick slices and put a layer on the bread and butter, cover with another slice of sugared bread and butter, and cut into sandwiches. This makes particularly nourishing and attractive sandwiches that particularly appeal to children.

Pawn, which from time to time were unofficially mentioned as Dietrich von Sternberg story possibilities.

FILM "CYCLES"

We hear a lot from time to time about "cycles" and fashions in types of pictures. Critics periodically accuse the producers of being sheeplike in following up something successful with imitations or sequels which lack spontaneity.

There are two sides to this question (writes P. L. Mannock in the Kinematograph Journal): Slavish imitation is facile. On the other hand, reasonable follow-up of something which, though successful, was hitherto regarded as rashly experimental, is often commercially, if not always artistically, sound.

The difficult point is to decide where this "vogue" goes past demand, and becomes satiation.

I consider that the time has come when British producers may wisely give up making "costume" subjects for a little while.

Since Korda's "Henry VIII," triumph most British studios have boldly launched, at enormous cost, a series of period stories, made with great care and elaboration. Had it not been for Korda's example, I very much doubt whether so many of them would have been made.

They are still being made, and the sum of money locked up in them represents a very frightening proportion of the capital available

HEROIC RESCUES

WEYMOUTH FIRE OUTBREAK

AGED WOMAN PERISHES

One woman is dead and three other persons—a garage proprietor, his son, and daughter—are lying in Weymouth District Hospital seriously injured as a result of a fire on Weymouth sea front in the early hours of the morning. It broke out in the drawingroom of a flat above the garage of Mr. Dan Guy, of Gloucester Row, Weymouth.

The flames spread so rapidly that the people sleeping in the rooms above, by jumping in one case, and by heroic rescues on the part of an hotel chef in another case, escaped the fate of a 70-year-old woman, Mrs. Bloxham, of Cheltenham, sleeping alone on the top floor, who was trapped in the blazing flat with all means of escape cut off, and was brought out dead.

The people in the flat were Mr. and Mrs. Dan Guy, their grown-up son and daughter, and Mrs. Bloxham, of Cheltenham.

It was the terrifying screams of the women at the windows in their night attire which brought people to the spot, including Mr. Fenner, a chef at a hotel next door, who got a short ladder and, balancing it on the sign above the garage entrance, helped Mrs. Guy and her daughter down. Then he helped the son. The two latter were badly burnt. Mr. Guy, senior, jumped from a third-floor window and broke a leg.

At the window of a bedroom above appeared the terror-stricken figure of Mrs. Bloxham, for one moment only. She was not seen alive again.

RESCUERS RISK LIVES

A dance of the United Services Portland, was in progress at the hotel at the time, and the last waltz was being danced when men rushed into the ballroom shouting "Fire." The music stopped at once, and the dancers, men and women in evening dress, rushed out into the cold night.

They found the fire blazing above the garage where their cars were standing. Several officers scaled the 50 foot parapet and tried to get to the imprisoned women in the top bedroom, but their efforts failed. They were driven back every time.

One officer was seen to scale the parapet and hang suspended from the coping trying to get into the bedroom through the window by kicking the glass in.

He failed after a most gallant attempt, in which he risked being hurled to the ground himself.

Mr. Fenner afterwards went on to the roof, and was lowered on a rope in an attempt to rescue Mrs. Bloxham.

"When I first went up the ladder I got within two feet of her window," he said. "She was terror-stricken, and I shouted to her to lean out as far as she could and breathe deeply. She sagged backwards and forwards, and then went out of sight."

Captain H. C. Mayo, a retired naval officer, who placed a wet handkerchief over his face, went up a ladder, and nearly got into Mrs. Bloxham's room, but he was defeated by the thick smoke and flames.

Mrs. Bloxham was a visitor to Weymouth, where her husband, Major Bloxham, is lying ill in a nursing home.

for the whole of our production industry.

There are signs that they are in danger of being overdone. My instinct, if I were a studio chief, would be to "go slow" on them. However, artistic they may turn out to be, failure in this class of film is inevitably a more serious financial jolt.

SIAM'S SYMPATHETIC AUTOCRAT

LOVE OF PEOPLE GIVES KING HIS POWER

(FORMER U.S. MINISTER TO SIAM)

KING Prajadhipok, who is freely admitted that when a sudden revolt shook the whole country, the king quietly and graciously acquiesced in the new deal. While it lost him the support and co-operation of the princes who were fitted by training and experience for ministerial posts, it enabled him to view the banishment of Paribatra with equanimity.

Government positions are no longer princely pickings, it being a constitutional stipulation that members of the royal household are barred from cabinet posts. The wisdom of this inhibition may well be questioned as it relegated to private life such men as the capable and cultured Prince Damrong Rajanubhab.

REACTION

It is quite conceivable that the abdication of King Prajadhipok would precipitate a revolution in a country that has existed under an absolute ruler for hundreds of years. This absolutism has continued until recently when Prajadhipok consented to the establishment of a constitutional monarchy which he had himself hoped to bring about in a more gradual and orderly fashion.

The Siamese as a nation have a deep and peculiar veneration for their King. The abdication of Prajadhipok would inevitably mean the fall of the dynasty and the election of a president or the assumption of power by a dictator. This would possibly mean chaos to the same degree as followed by the fall of the empire of China.

DATES BACK TO 1925

Transformation of the Government of Siam from an absolute to a constitutional monarchy was conceived by King Prajadhipok the very night he assumed the throne on Nov. 26, 1925. His brother, Rama VI, who had ruled the country since 1910, after their father, the famous Chulalongkorn, had no such modern views.

Rama VI possessed great personal charm, held the loyalty of the masses, played magnificently and glamorously, but responsibility of administration were directed by favourites, aided by 200 foreigners who served in technical capacities. It was the late Lord Northcliffe who said that entertainment in the palace of Rama was more lavish than at the Court of St. James's.

Prajadhipok is no visionary. Devoted to his country, notwithstanding his long absences abroad, he felt that a limited constitutional regime should be established, but he then felt no reason for haste. He was the seventh king of a dynasty which has functioned so successfully that Siam stood alone in southern Asia as the only free and independent nation. He made his plans carefully and gradually, appointing a supreme council of state composed of five senior princes and providing for a legislative council of ministers which, with others, all named by the sovereign, had a membership of 40.

NOT USED TO REVOLTS

Siam was not accustomed to revolutionary disturbances. The natives are good-natured and as indolent as the general run of people who live in a tropical climate. So in 1931 Prajadhipok came to the United States without misgivings, leaving his half-brother, Prince Paribatra of Narara Svarga, in the position of regent.

It was during that comparatively brief period that this ambitious and reactionary royal personage worked furiously to devise a constitutional formula that would with one hand hold out to the people a representative system of government, while maintaining in the other complete control of the principal places of power for members of the reigning family. He had travelled quite a distance on this path when the King returned. While the details of what came next are somewhat obscure, it is

The counter revolution of the summer of 1933 was futile, although temporary occupation of the central air-drome and plant at Donnmuang caused considerable uneasiness. The movement represented an undisguised attempt to regain for members of the royal family the various prerogatives and benefits they had enjoyed for generations under a system of absolutism. The principal stabilizing factor was His Majesty King Prajadhipok, who sincerely desires to lead his people along the broad road of constitutional government and to reform the abuses that were common under his immediate predecessor.

There is slight comparison between the Siamese Revolution and those of some other countries, but it is significant that army chieftains resent, salary decreases which came as one of the government economy measures. Moreover, the germs of political unrest stirred in the breasts of a number of Siamese, who had been educated abroad and who chafed under conditions which restricted career advancement.

A youth of Siam, after seeing countless opportunities for individualism abroad, found them denied to him upon return to his native land. He could rise, but the top positions in the Government were generally reserved for those born to the purple. Most of these young men had been trained in the United States and England where the accident of birth counts for little in the selection of government leaders, and where merit is recognized, no matter how lowly the beginnings.

THE SIMPLE LIFE

Communism has had no part in the Asiatic drama as played in Siam. The people are by nature conservative and there has been no oppression in their routine to excite them to rally around communist standards. Their needs are few. The rice fields and fishing streams provide sustenance. The problem of sufficient clothing does not exist.

They are allowed to cultivate their paddy lands in peace and they would be the first to resist any attempt to socialize their belongings. Rice is the life-food of the country and in a one-crop land, where agricultural conditions are similar to those of Japan, but where living is easier and land is plentiful, it may be expected that agrarian legislation will occupy an important place in parliamentary deliberations.

The only sizable foreign colony is represented by 250,000 Chinese in Bangkok, but the Siamese Government has been steadfast in its refusal to discuss treaty relations with its huge northern neighbour, and the alien population of the capital is not difficult to control.

Foreign Eyes

Keenest interest in Siam's internal political affairs is naturally evidenced by Great Britain and France. The reason is chiefly geographical. Forty years ago the French east covetous eyes on the kingdom, and the invasion of 1893 cost Siam all of her possessions on the left bank of the Mekong. For 12 years French troops occupied Siamese territory, evacuating Chantaburi in 1905.

The Cambodian provinces were ceded to France in 1907, and two years later the suzerainty of the Malay states of Trengganu, Kelantan, Kedah and Perak was transferred to Great Britain. Siam, now with an area greater than that of Great Britain and Ireland, remains a buffer state between French Indo-China and British Burma, a situation particularly satisfactory to British interests, which dominate the commerce of

LEAGUE SEEKS TO PURGE BOOKS

CO-OPERATION SOUGHT

Geneva.

Study of international relations is a subject which is becoming of increasing interest to the world. It is stated in a report to the League of Nations by the Intellectual Co-operation Organization.

A programme for the coming year includes study for the formation of an intellectual elite, and the origins of western civilization. A vast new field, that of social and political science, has been opened up to intellectual co-operation as a result of the initiative taken in 1933 and 1934 by Prof. James T. Shotwell and M. Edouard Herriot, chairman of the governing body of the International Institute of Intellectual Co-operation.

It is proposed: 1. To draw up a list of the institutions and organizations which engage in the different countries and internationally, either in research or teaching in the field of social and political science; 2. To initiate research into the principles and methods of the various subjects into which they may be divided, and 3. To undertake a series of studies of certain specific problems. The first of these studies will concern the effects of mechanisation on modern civilisation.

Another interesting proposal, in the educational sphere, is that which concerns the revision of school textbooks. The committee on intellectual co-operation contemplates supplementing the improvement schemes now in existence by the preparation of a standard draft bilateral agreement for the abolition of differences in the interpretation of certain historical events in the textbooks now in use.

"We believe," says the report, "that no work for international organisation in the world, for an international order and, consequently, for peace, will be durable, or even possible, if not accompanied by a corresponding effort in the intellectual sphere."

the country. Whatever protection a charter membership in the League of Nations guarantees to Siam may become a problem of the future; but there is no indication of interference by either of her powerful neighbours. With the opening of Siam's first Parliament by King Prajadhipok, absolute government disappeared, democracy to make way for an experiment which naturally attracted world-wide interest. Could a people of ten millions, with the reported abdication of whose knowledge of self government is almost wholly lacking, stand at the beginning of a new uncharted period?

ARMS FOUND IN SUITCASE

CARRIER ARRESTED AND FINED

His suspicions aroused at seeing a quantity of baggage being unloaded from a sampan on to the Frigate wall near the Tung On Wharf at about 9 a.m. yesterday, Revenue Officer Major had a suitcase forced open, and discovered under a quantity of old clothing a Colt automatic pistol, three magazines, a revolver and 200 rounds of ammunition.

The suitcase was claimed by a man named Li Kwok, who, when charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Magistracy this morning, with possession of arms and ammunition, claimed that a friend had asked him to take the suitcase ashore, where a relative would call for it.

Mr. Wynne-Jones remarked that when he took baggage, he should make sure there was no contraband in it. However, as there was a possibility that defendant did not know what the bag contained, a fine of $50 would be imposed.

The arms, ammunition and suitcase were ordered to be confiscated.

On Thursday, December 13th, 1934, at 5.45 p.m.

A CORDIAL INVITATION IS EXTENDED TO ALL.

UNREGISTERED MUI-TSAIS

NOMINAL FINES IN TWO CASES

Leung Yi, 34, a married woman living at 22 Wing Fung Street, was summoned before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court to-day for keeping an unregistered mui-tai. Sin Tsui-shu, aged 7.

Sub-Inspector H. W. Fraser stated that a tardy report was actually made some months after the girl was brought to Hongkong after being presented by her natural mother to the defendant's family. The girl was exceptionally well-treated, being employed to look after the children, and she did not wish to return to her mother who was very poor and would not be able to support her.

A nominal fine of $25 was imposed.

Identical facts were presented in another case, a married woman, Lam Man-ye, 22, of No. 3 Tsui Yin Lane, being also summoned for keeping Tam Moon, aged 13, an unregistered mui-tai. As in the previous case, the girl was presented by her natural mother and brought to the Colony. She, too, was well-treated and it was indicated as possible that if returned to her mother, she might be resold. A belated report was made to the S.C.A. by the defendant acting on the advice of a friend.

A fine of $25 was also imposed in this case.

NEW REPULSE BAY BEACH

Vote Required For Road Completion

Amongst the votes to come before the Finance Committee of the Legislative Council at its next meeting is one for $9,444 in respect of the new road to bathing beaches south-east of Repulse Bay.

It is explained that the full cost of the work was estimated to be $122,500, and it is expected that the work will be completed by the end of 1934, so the sum of $4,000 as retention money has been allowed for, in the 1935 Estimates.

The revised estimated cost for the completion of the work, apart from the retention money, is $118,000. Of this sum $50,000 is approved in 1934 Estimates, $55,000 has been received from the Trust & Realty Co., and utilised in 1934, and $3,555 was spent in 1933. An additional sum of $9,444 is therefore required to meet 1934 expenditure.

A sum of $15,000 was provided in 1933 Estimates, but the sum of $3,555 only was spent, of the balance $11,444, a revote of $9,444 is requested.

The Kowloon Magistrate, Mr. K. C. Lee, a shop-keeper, appeared as complainant.

MAN ADMITS FOUR CHARGES

Admitting four charges of theft and house-breaking, Lau Ming, unemployed, was sentenced to a total of five months' hard labour by Mr. Wynne-Jones, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Defendant was charged with having, on November 6, stolen a suit of silk clothing and jacket, the property of Ip Yung, from No. 27 Pottinger Street, second floor; theft of a suit of clothing and five keys, the property of Fung Lai, from No. 124 Nam Cheung Street, ground floor, Shamshuipo; breaking and entering No. 122 Cheung Sha Wan Road, Shamshuipo, and stealing an overcoat, the property of Wong So, on December 9, and breaking and entering the first floor of No. 354 Queen's Road Central, with intent to commit a felony yesterday.

Detective-Sergeant Goodwin, prosecuting, said that about 5.30 a.m. yesterday morning, Tang Fuk, the complainant in the fourth charge, was lying awake in his bed at No. 354 Queen's Road Central, first floor, which was the branch office of the Chinese Telegraph Company. He heard a noise, and saw the door open. He got out of bed, closed the door and switched on the light, and found the defendant hiding underneath the counter.

When defendant was taken to the Police Station, he was found to be wearing a suit of clothes, which was later traced to Fung Lai. He also had two pawn tickets relating to the other stolen articles of clothing.

TRAMS HELD UP BY MISHAP

FATALITY REPORTS PROVE UNTRUE

Sensational reports of one man being killed and others severely injured in a mishap near the Soldiers' Club this morning were later proved to be without foundation.

The story was that a machine which workmen were operating on the tramway lines fused, resulting in an explosion which was said to have caused the casualties.

Actually, however, no such incident occurred, but there was a mishap in which a coolie received injuries to his leg and was later removed to hospital by ambulance.

It appears that the coolie was riding on a lorry on which there was a big dynamo weighing about a ton, when, in turning the corner just beyond the Soldiers' Club, the dynamo slipped off on to the ground, carrying the coolie with it. As a result, the coolie's leg was badly crushed by the dynamo.

Tramway traffic was held up for some time before the dynamo could be removed.

First-aid was rendered to the suffering man, whose leg was badly severed, by Corporals J. S. Long and E. J. Reeves, of the R.A.M.C.

POLICE ACTION CRITICISED

second objection would be sustained. The jury having resumed their seats, the Assistant Attorney General proceeded to put the case for the Crown.

In this case of poisoning, he said, there was no need to prove a motive. It was sufficient to prove the administration of the poison, and, on the other hand, there could be no half measures about the verdict. If the jury did not find accused guilty of murder, he was entirely innocent.

IN LOVE WITH WIFE?

Deceased had occupied a hut shared by his wife, accused and other casual workers. During the weeks prior to the fatal incident, Chik Wing and his wife had not been on happy terms, and once she had attempted to run away. The woman was quite friendly with accused, who was also friendly with his employer. It was the suggestion of the Crown that accused was in love with the woman and that she did not absolutely discourage him.

At mid-day on August 6, deceased went to a nearby tea house in quite good health. He returned to his hut at 3 p.m. and ate some congee which was in a pot on the table and a few minutes later was taken violently ill, vomiting and experiencing pain in the throat. He called in a relative, and, thinking that he had been poisoned, he and the friend examined the pot. They found a gritty substance there and similar traces in another pot, which were later found to be arsenic.

A Chinese doctor was called in and Chik Wing was taken to the Kwong Wah Hospital with a sample of the congee. The sample was found to contain 120 grains of arsenic. Chik Wing became worse and a Magistrate took his evidence at the bedside before he expired early on the morning of August 8.

ARSENIC STOMACH

In deceased's stomach was found one-thousandth of a grain of arsenic. Later the body was examined and further organs examined and in them was found more than a fatal dose of arsenic, which was about four or five grains. In the congee there was enough poison to kill forty people. At midnight on August 6, the hut was visited by detectives who found a pot and congee with traces of the poison, and three dead puppies. Another dead puppy and a dead chicken were found later at the hut and these examined together, produced three-quarters of a grain of arsenic.

WOMAN AS WITNESS

Accused and the wife of Chik Wing were charged with attempted murder in the early morning of August 7 and when deceased died, the charge was altered to murder. The charge was afterwards withdrawn from the woman and she was to be a witness against accused in the present trial. The position was a complicated one as persons accused of a crime could not be questioned, but only their voluntary statements could be taken. In this case the woman could not be questioned until the charge against her had been withdrawn.

In answer to the charge of murder, the accused had said: "I had no intention of murdering him. I had no intention of putting the medicine into the congee. I leave the matter in your hands."

In consequence of what the woman said, a search was made and in the garden was discovered arsenic, which was part of a quantity purchased by accused through a friend in July.

Police Constable C. 342 said, he spoke to accused at the hut and he said Chik Wing's wife had made the congee and the accused, and she had eaten of it before Chik Wing.

Detective Inspector A. J. W. Dorrington spoke of the discovery of the arsenic hidden in a bush in the garden.

In reply to Mr. Sheldon, he said that after the charge had been withdrawn against the woman, she was detained on a Magistrate's warrant and kept for some time at the Police Station. Later she was taken to Latchikok Gaol.

TO BE BANISHED

Witness: "Because a detention warrant had then been taken out. Does that mean that she was to be banished?—Yes. After she has appeared here as a star witness for the Crown she will be banished?—Yes. Why?—Because she is undesirable. Why?—Because she took part in the crime. His Lordship: What proof is there of that? This decision is arrived at by police officers before the trial has begun? Witness: So I understand. So at least you regard this woman as an accomplice?—Yes. Evidence as to the collection of the poisoned objects were given by Inspector Allen, Sgt. Parker, sub-Inspector Carter, Lam Wai-wing, Chan Kwok-leung and Kwok Mun.

LEAGUE'S WORK PRAISED

YUGO-SLAVIA TO MAKE AMENDS?

BENES VIEWS SITUATION

Budapest, Dec. 11. Yugo-Slav authorities assert that most of the Hungarians recently expelled from Yugo-Slavia will probably be allowed to return in the near future.

Reuter reports from Prague state that in Dr. Benes' opinion the recent session of the League Council will have a most salutary effect upon international politics in 1935.

BRITISH SATISFACTION

London, Dec. 11. Replying to a Commons question on the Yugo-Slav-Hungarian dispute, Sir John Simon expressed his satisfaction that the Yugo-Slavian appeal to the League, which at times threatened to give rise to sharp differences of view, has now been dealt with in a way which should lead to reconciliation and appeasement.

He said the British Government had throughout been exerting themselves in all useful quarters to "urge moderation. He took particular satisfaction in the important part which Mr. Eden, in co-operation with other members of the Council, had played in the matter.

"The outcome," added the Foreign Secretary, "now largely depends on the local situation as between Yugo-Slavia and Hungary, and it is sincerely to be hoped that this will improve. But there can be no doubt that the favorable position which has been reached from a situation which so recently appeared to threaten grave consequences, is due, first, and foremost, to the existence and effective use of the League of Nations."—British Wireless.

UNUSUAL CASE CONCEALING BIRTH OF CHILD

An unusual case came before Mr. Thomson at the Central Police Court this morning, when Chin Heung-tai, 44, described as a married woman, was charged with concealing the birth of a child.

The proceedings were the sequel to the discovery of the remains of a newborn child at 566 Queen's Road West, on Monday morning.

The defendant, who is under medical observation, was not in Court.

A week's remand for further police inquiries was given. The case has been instituted under the Ordinance dealing with Offences Against the Person.

Human bones were found by the ground floor inmates of No. 566 Queen's Road West, forced down a drain, and the gruesome discovery being communicated to the police, investigations led to the detention of a woman, the defendant in the case, who was living on an upper floor.

The decomposed remains of another Chinese baby, encased in a large copper pot, were found this morning dumped in a nullah to the west of the Commercial Press Works, opposite Mingyuen Gardens at North Point. The police are making enquiries.

RUMANIA'S DEBTS

London, Dec. 11. The Rumanian Minister of Commerce, M. Manulescu-Strunga, is arriving in London next week to discuss with British Government representatives the problem of the large amount of debts outstanding in Rumania to trade creditors in Britain.—British Wireless.

Fung King-sam, Chinese doctor, said he sold arsenic to Fung Kam in July.

Fung Kam said he was a vegetable gardener and knew accused well. In July accused asked him to buy some arsenic which he wished to use in conjunction with a medicine to cure himself of ringworm. Witness bought the arsenic and offered to help apply it but his offer was refused. The arsenic cost him ten cents, but accused gave him $1.00 as a lucky packet.

After legal argument on the admissibility of certain statements, in which the Chief Justice ruled against the Crown, further evidence was not proceeded with, and, on his Lordship's instructions, the jury returned a verdict of "Not Guilty."

PORTUGUESE BOY KIDNAPPED

TAKEN FROM HOME IN KOWLOON

Luigi Ribeiro, six-year old son of Mr. L. G. Ribeiro, a wealthy Portuguese, residing at No. 7, Hanoi Road, was kidnapped in sensational manner on Monday afternoon. Smart police work resulted in the recovery of the boy and the detention of two well-known Portuguese in connection with the crime.

The two arrested will be charged at the Kowloon Police Court. It appears that at 5.30 p.m. on Monday, a closed car drew up outside Mr. Ribeiro's home and two men entered. They spoke to the boy, took him out to the car, and disappeared. There was no one in the house at the time, and some alarm was felt when the occupants returned and found the boy missing.

Thinking the boy was playing with some friends, no action was taken for the time being, but when a note arrived, saying that the boy had been kidnapped, and demanding a large sum of money for his release, Mr. Ribeiro immediately got in touch with the police.

The note stated that contact with the kidnappers could be made at a well-known Chinese Hotel on the Hongkong side. Police officers rushed to the hotel and apprehended a man there.

Receiving certain information from him, they then proceeded to 183 Fuk Wing Street and found the boy, frightened but unhurt. He was immediately returned to his parents and another Portuguese who was obviously guarding him was arrested.

Altogether, the boy was absent from his home for eight hours.

CORRESPONDENCE

Hongkong's Aerial Future

The Editor,
Hongkong Telegraph

Sir—I have read with much interest the article on the first page of Monday's issue of the Hongkong Telegraph regarding the fact that Hongkong is being left out of the itinerary of the newly proposed California-China Airway Service. I wish to compliment you on having brought this to the attention of the public and on your having urged the public of Hongkong to take prompt action in endeavouring to influence the Pan-American Airways to include Hongkong as a port-of-call.

The advantages to Hongkong are too numerous to mention, and it is quite obvious that with the many ocean-going connections from Hongkong to all parts of the world, a stop at Hongkong will be far more convenient to passengers than would a stop at Canton, where it would necessitate the passengers travelling by small boat or train to Hongkong to make their connections.

It may possibly be too late to induce the operators of the California-China Airway Service to include Hongkong as a port-of-call, but no effort should be spared by the commercial houses and general public of Hongkong to have Hongkong placed on the California-China Airway route.

PEAK THEFT.

HOUSEBOY FINED THIS MORNING

For being in unlawful possession of two pairs of white gabardine trousers, the property of Mr. W. G. Robertson, Lau Chun, aged 25 years, No. 2 boy employed by Mr. Neilson, of 166 The Peak, was fined $75 by Mr. Scofield at the Central Police Court this morning, with the alternative of six weeks' imprisonment.

Sub-Inspector A. Kirby said accused was arrested by a Chinese constable in Mount Kellott Road, carrying the garments in a basket with pieces of Chinese clothing. He admitted that the trousers belonged to Mr. W. G. Robertson, who before going home some weeks ago, had lived at No. 166 The Peak before Mr. Neilson moved in.

Brings such a drefful heart-ache,
And burning to my eyes.
I thought I'd ask the doctor,

But doctor only smiled and said,
'Just run and play, my dear,
'We've Tablets that are Baby's Own,

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 12, 1934.

A TRIUMPH FOR COMMON-SENSE

What threatened to develop into a first-class European crisis, possibly involving the major Powers, has been averted by Hungary's acceptance of a compromise resolution dealing with the subject of terrorist activities, with special reference to the recent Marseilles outrage. This resolution condemns the Marseilles murders, calls on Hungary to fulfil her international obligations by taking appropriate measures against authorities found culpable of negligence, and sets in train machinery for the eventual conclusion of an international convention designed to prevent political terrorism. In this manner has the threat of hostilities in the Balkans been warded off. We need only take our minds back to the incident at Sarajevo, which was the culminating point in a state of tension leading to the Great War, to realise how, but for the intervention of pacifying influences, the Yugo-Slavian-Hungarian quarrel might easily have developed into a situation imperilling the peace of Europe. Britain, happily, through the medium of Mr. Anthony Eden, was able to exercise a restraining influence at the crucial moment, and was effectively supported by France and Italy. A tribute is due to the statesmen of these countries at the happy culmination of their efforts, and at the same time Hungary is to be commended for accepting the compromise plan in a spirit which illustrates her sincere desire for a sensible solution of a delicate issue. The recriminations now at an end, it is for all nations to work together in the common task of preventing, as far as is humanly possible, the hatching and carrying out of terrorist plots for political purposes. There is another aspect of the successful adjustment of this threat to European peace which deserves especial emphasis—namely, the fact that it was through the instrumentality of the League of Nations that the issue was smoothed out. League prestige will be greatly enhanced by this fresh triumph. Indeed, it is not too much to say that, on this incident alone, the League's creation and continued existence have been more than vindicated. It was precisely for the handling of such threats to world peace that the League was brought into being. Had it not been in existence, there can be little doubt that Europe would once again have become involved in the toils of a major catastrophe, the eventual upshot of which would have been disaster to everybody concerned.

NOTES OF THE DAY DEPRESSED AREAS

There is universal agreement that energetic measures are required to deal with the distress in the four depressed areas: South Wales, Cumberland, the North-East Coast, and South Scotland. Four Government Commissioners have investigated conditions there and drawn up reports which were published and debated in the House of Commons recently, when Mr. Neville Chamberlain announced that the Government has decided to take certain emergency measures forthwith. A vote of £2,000,000 is promised at once, and two Commissioners are to be appointed with wide powers. They will carry out emergency schemes while the recommendations of the four reports are being further examined. Various suggestions were put forward by Mr. Chamberlain as to the directions in which action might be taken, and he mentioned land drainage among other things. "We are a little surprised that the provision of more new aerodromes was not included among the projects," says the Daily Mail, continuing agitation for more aircraft and aerodromes for Britain's defence. "Their construction would employ a very considerable number of workers. Some sites have already been acquired in connection with the Government's air programme, but, considerably more are needed for the very great increase in the number of our aircraft which is inevitable."

CAPITAL SHIPS

Decision on America's ship-building policy is complicated by the fact that there is still a good deal of uncertainty about the type of ships the American navy ought to have. Naval authorities in the main stand firm for a fleet built about a strong nucleus of capital ships, or battleships, reasoned by a considerable number of heavy cruisers. Yet there is a wide belief that the battleship has outlived its usefulness, and that the terrific expense of maintaining these costly vessels is one the navy might very well avoid. Add to this the growing feeling that aeroplanes and submarines are revolutionising naval warfare, and you have a situation in which decision on a naval programme would be difficult enough, even if it were not necessary to adjust programmes to those of other powers. A good exposition of the theory that the battleship is still the backbone of the fleet came recently in a public address by Rear Admiral Joseph K. Tausig, acting chief of U.S. naval operations.

FLOATING FORTRESS

America, says Admiral Tausig, needs the battleship because of its lack of naval bases—the battleship, with its wealth of heavy guns, serving as a kind of floating base which can protect lighter ships against superior forces. Furthermore, says Admiral Tausig, the improvement of the submarine and aerial branches of naval warfare has made the battleship even more indispensable than before. It is the only warship which can be armoured and protected sufficiently to withstand the shock of bombs and torpedoes. Here we have a brief and understandable outline of the majority viewpoint in the navy; and it is worth reading, as an antidote to the free and easy talk one constantly hears about the obsolescence of the battleship. We are often assured that submarines and aeroplanes are the all-important units of a fleet in modern times; but the experts charged with maintenance of the navy still believe—and seem to have reason for their belief—that a fighting fleet, in the last analysis, is only as strong as its capital ships.

POLITICAL PUZZLE

The profound public unrest in France, which found violent expression in the riots of a few months ago, evidently still exists. It is hardly going too far to say that the republic right now is meeting one of the severest tests in its history. The Doumergue cabinet, seeking to revise the French constitution so as to end the notorious instability of governments, has fallen. In recent years the average life of a French cabinet has been nine months. A government which must fall every time it attempts to handle any really controversial measure cannot provide the leadership which the nation needs. So Premier Doumergue tried to change things, putting more power in the hands of the Premier, clipping the wings of Parliament and shearing the innumerable blocs of their power to precipitate a cabinet crisis whenever the mood seized them. Against this plan the cry of dictatorship was raised. It is not yet clear whether the French democracy will be able to preserve and strengthen itself in this time of confusion and trial. No-one, it is certain, feels like trying just at present.

REMAKING WORLD'S GREAT CITIES

By PROF. C. H. REILLY

THE Government will introduce a measure early in the new session of Parliament, which begins next week, prohibiting ribbon development along the great arterial roads. This is one aspect of the larger problem raised by the King's eloquent appeal recently for the use of the imagination in the shaping of the world of streets in which millions spend their lives. His words should make us all think anew of our cities as things the outward aspect of which we all to a certain extent own. If the London County Council adopts, as its Town Planning Committee suggests, the Town and Country Planning Act of 1932 for the whole town, it will be in a position to control, as certain provincial cities already can by their private Acts of Parliament when they care to do so—which, it must be confessed, is not often—the height, shape and colour of every new building.

It will be able to lay down guiding rules for those about to build, saying, for instance, that such and such a street should be a stone one, such and such a red brick one, and so on.

We can have if we like Piccadilly as gay with electric signs as Broadway, New York, and Pall Mall as free as the adjacent Fifth Avenue. These are immense powers and when to them is added the power to clear great areas of slums and replan them, closing and abolishing streets and building courtyard after courtyard of great buildings, holding within them gardens, playgrounds and swimming pools, it will be seen we are at the start of a new era.

Leeds is already planning to rebuild a third of the city. What are we going to do in London? First, I think we must free our hands still further. The old London Building Act still blocks the way as regards the height of buildings. No building can be erected with its main front wall to the street higher than eighty feet, and then with two setbacks above that. A flat rate, except for towers and domes, was then imposed for the whole town, regardless of the varying widths of the streets, the new ways of living in flats and tenements, the improvement in lifts, the lessening of the smoke nuisance due to the lesser number of domestic chimneys, and, most of all, regardless of the architectural advantages of having taller buildings on certain prominent sites where they would not overshadow their neighbours, and where they might relieve the monotony of a town of all one height. A new Building Act is always under consideration. Let us hope that it gives the central authority power to allow such buildings under proper safeguards and with proper rating. Stockholm has, for instance, the fine dramatic effect, denied to us, of two identical tall buildings forming a gateway to one of her main streets.

As these streets lead to the open country they must cease to be lined with little houses. Town planners have been calling attention to the danger to life and to the destruction of the beauty of the countryside such ribbon development has caused for 20 years. New York had stopped such development before the war. Only now, however, has our Government woken up to it.

More important still would be the power to acquire property other than slum property for public improvements, such as the County Council is now seeking to enable it to form an embankment on the south side of the river. Assuming then London and by that I mean something much bigger than the present County Council area, had obtained the power to remodel itself for the benefit of all, and in a way to allow the King's appeal for the use of the imagination to be effective, what would be some of the first things at which we should aim. Before anything else I should put the abolition of smoke, so that we could have a clean town. London is already far cleaner than many large provincial towns, but it is, nevertheless, far behind most Continental ones. Secondly, I suggest, as has often been done before, we should quickly schedule a wide belt of land round the town to be for ever unbuilt on. This belt should be connected by wide parkways lined with trees and grass to the present outer parks, or to the inner ones if they can be reached, so that not only could one quickly get away from the streets to the country, but the country air could penetrate to town.

Thirdly, the slum clearance should go on, but far greater areas, stretching from one main road to another, should be involved in each scheme, as Liverpool is doing to-day. It has been proved that with lifts and structures 120ft. high, half as high again as at present allowed, the actual buildings need not occupy more than 5 per cent. of the land, the rest being open space where there is at present a tangle of little roads and little houses. If we did this on a brave enough scale all living rooms could face the sun. We could give to everyone the light and air—indeed, far more of them—that the houses in the West End get from their squares and parks. Until we rebuild great sections of the town and abolish the streets save for a few main traffic ones between the blocks, we might do as Salford has already done, and close a few hundred with posts and chains, making them thereby safe playgrounds for children and safe sitting-out places for the aged. We might go farther and make them gay with colour wash and bright paint and bushes in the tubs from the parks. The few great traffic streets left must be made to dip under and over one another and be connected by ramps. With no cross streets, traffic can be faster, still, not slower, and yet safer. As we get to the special purposes, factory areas, warehouse areas, business areas. Each must have its special character of road and building.

The business area, for instance, need have no wheeled traffic at all in certain hours. It is because all these areas are muddled together at present that we have our traffic difficulties. It has been found in New York that certain businesses congregate in certain tall buildings. The American architect of Bush House in the Strand has said that he could pay

The Very Idea!

SAY IT WITH SLOGANS

By George

ARE we becoming a pampered race?

That was the question that loomed like a menace in our mind as we confronted our mirror yesterday.

We were about to amputate a Charlie Chase moustache which had sprung up like a mushroom growth in the exciting hours of the night.

About us was the romantic scent of eau de cologne, lavender shaving soap and carbollic whist, in full negligence, completed the picture of a Man of the Twentieth Century.

The telephone bell rang and we draped a towel over our shoulders on our way out to the hall. The text for the day was "Your Luck's out if you've no Lux in. If you must wash, use Lux and make work a luxury."

We sighed and picked up the telephone. It was the girl. We hastily transferred the towel to our waist—After all we are not yet engaged.

"Hello dear! Have you had your Ovaltine?"

"Sweetheart! We haven't cleaned our teeth yet."

"Well don't forget to use Forhan's..."

We smiled.

"You won't dare smile if pyorrhoea attacks your teeth."

We pulled the towel a little closer.

"Keep that school girl complexion," we retorted.

"Use white noggert and start the day with a good polish."

"What is Xmas without fruit or flowers?"

"What shall I give?"

"Kilrin beer is the choice of the multitude."

"Don't be fooled by platitudes. Findlars Dry Gin."

"Later may be too late. A stitch in time..."

"Makes father's pants fit little Willie."

"Anyhow how are you?"

"Lactogen has made me twice the woman I was."

"Good God. I refuse to take two women out." (coolly).

"You've done it before and got away with it." (nastily).

"I thought we had buried the past." (plaintively).

"What do you take me for? An undertaker?"

"No honey. An alarm clock. Do you realise that it is only 10 a.m.? I'll give you a ring later."

"And make a honest woman of me?"

"Not necessary, sweetheart."

And that nature in the heat, we reflected philosophically as she hung up on us.

The landlady perceived that there was a rift in the lute. "Say it with flowers," she advised sympathetically. "Nuts."

"Yes, you must eat more fruit."

We threw a flower pot on her head and went back to our toilet. The Boy rushed up the stairs shouting "Aspirin will cure your headache."

Everybody can ice-skate to work and your temperature will drop sixty degrees.

It's A Hot Idea

Star-Bulletin, Honolulu, Hawaii, Gentlemen:

I suppose that because you are in the tropics all the people are complaining about the heat and if they don't complain, they should. Why be hot when you can be cool? I have a grand patent to reduce your temperature and have everybody at business and at home nice and cool all the day.

My patent is to have all the streets of Honolulu and the whole Island flooded with two feet of water, then put ammonia pipes underneath the water, then turn on the ammonia and freeze all the water. Everybody can ice-skate to work and your temperature will drop sixty degrees.

Truly yours,
James Jordan.

FIRE'S AWFUL TOLL

GUESTS TRAPPED IN HOTEL

LEAP FROM WINDOWS

Lansing, Dec. 11.
Roused from their sleep by the ominous cries of "Fire!" and driven into a state of panic by flames that leaped close around them, over 200 guests at the Kerns Hotel here struggled through fire exits, fled down the stairs and so to the streets, leaped from windows into the ice-fringed river upon whose bank the hotel stood, or perished. It is feared that fifty lives were lost.

Within a few hours of the outbreak police had accounted for 100 of approximately 200 guests known to have been in the hotel at the time the outbreak occurred. But it was anticipated that many of those listed as missing would be found safe.

Police stated that they believed between 20 and 50 bodies were buried in the ruins. Searchers cannot start digging until tomorrow. The guests in the hotel included twenty state legislators, five of whom were found dead and one of whom is missing. Another is believed to be dying of his injuries.

GHASTLY WORK

It was some hours before searchers could go into the ruins, but early in the morning the first effort was made. Bodies recovered were charred beyond identification in most cases.

Police made the ghastly discovery that there were an unknown number of dead in the river about this time. They had leaped from their windows when the fire was close upon them, in a desperate bid for life.

Some of the survivors of the fire fled from the hotel in flimsy night attire and ran bare-footed into the snow-covered street when the temperature was only a few degrees above zero.—Reuter.

The United Press states that there are thirty seriously injured, most of them burned badly, but some of them hurt by jumping from windows or suffering from exposure in the river.

Later a very successful paper-chase was held.

London, Dec. 11.
As a result of the League Council's request that a British officer should be Commander-in-Chief of the International Force in the Saar, the War Office has appointed Major General G.E.S. Brind, D.S.O., C.M.G., to that post.

The British contingent, which will number approximately 1,500, will consist of Headquarters 13th Infantry Brigade (Commander Brigadier J.H.T. Priestman), the 1st Battalion of the East Lancashire Regiment, and the 1st Battalion of the Essex Regiment, together with a small detachment of other arms and services.

Major General Brind, who is an R.A. officer, was until recently Deputy Chief of the General Staff, Army Headquarters, India. He saw service in the South African War, and in the Great War was on the General Staff in France, Belgium and Italy.

TOTAL FORCE OF 3,300

The League Council concluded a notable session to-day with a brief meeting at which the report was adopted of the committee dealing with the question of International Saar force.

The Council decided that the Force, contributed from Great Britain, Italy, the Netherlands and Sweden, will be placed at the disposal of the Saar Governing Commission, which is responsible for the maintenance of order. It will number approximately 3,300. Any expenditure involved over that for which provision has already been made will be met by France and Germany.

The French representative, M. Massigli, announced that his Government would provide free transport for the detachments through France.

The Council adjourned until January 11, instead of until January 20, as previously arranged, and will thus be in session while the plebiscite is being held.—British Wireless.

BURMA BENEFITS BY REFORMS

Responsible Government Prescribed

SAME POLICY AS IN INDIA

CRITICS IN COMMONS

London, Dec. 11.

The position of Burma, when that state becomes separated from its present India affiliations, was discussed in the House of Commons to-day when the India debate was continued by Mr. R. A. Butler, Under-Secretary of State for India, who said that the same guiding principles would be applied in Burma as in India.

He described the constitution for Burma as a form of responsible Government, subject to certain safeguards and reservations.

The Government's general policy was later vigorously attacked by Brig.-Gen. Sir Henry Pige-Croft, (Conservative) who contended that a small population of India, constituting the politically minded classes, were definitely hostile or frankly dissatisfied with the constitution suggested for them. He urged the Government to drop the whole scheme, declaring the recent elections in India had showed the electorate to be definitely opposed to it.

Mr. H. Graham White, (Liberal) and the Rt. Hon. Lord Eustace Percy (Conservative) made rejoinder, warning against a policy of drift. But they argued that though risks might be involved in the Select Committee's proposals, abandonment of them would not only entail risk, but the certainty of disaster.—Reuter.

Cambridge Overwhelm Oxford

Annual Rugger Match At Twickenham

London, Dec. 11. Forty-five thousand spectators, crowding the Twickenham ground to-day, saw Cambridge overwhelm Oxford by 29 points to 14 in the annual Rugger match between the two great Universities. At half time the score was Cambridge 6, Oxford 4. The usual animated scenes were witnessed.

The ground was in good condition, the turf yielding from the effect of the recent rain.

Cambridge kicked off against a strong wind. The Oxford forwards were repulsed by Cambridge, whose forwards dribbled the ball down field. Then came a spell of midfield play, with the usual heroic tackling by each side.

CAMBRIDGE SCORES

Cambridge opened the scoring. The forwards heeled slowly and the ball went to Herring, Cliff Jones and Wooler, who handled in turn and then passed to Fyfe, who streaked for the line and hurled himself over to score. Cambridge failed to convert.

Oxford replied when Bush took possession from the scrum half and brought off a beautiful drop kick from outside the Cambridge twenty-five.

Cambridge pressed hotly and after a rare fight, Oxford was penalised on their own twenty-five. Just before the interval, Parker scored a penalty goal.

Cambridge was definitely on top after the resumption and the Oxford defence crumbled in the face of repeated rushes in which Fyfe, on the wing and Granmer, were outstanding.

Long and accurate kicking saved the situation but Cambridge continued to pile on points.

Fyfe scored but failed to convert. Jones then dropped one beautifully between the posts. Parker converted another try and Fyfe, after a dogged burst, went over for Parker to convert. Immediately afterwards, Wooler brought off a wonderful drop goal from almost half way. Johnson completed the scoring with an unconverted try at the last minute.

The teams were: Warr, Lorraine, Oxford, Grime, Rees-Jones, Bush, (Capt.), Granmer, Rees-Jones, Bush, Guy, McGrath, Nicholson, Pinner, Bowers, Wray, Cooper, Bloxham and James.

Cambridge: Parker, Johnson, Chandler, Waulter, Fyfe, Jones, Brown, Leather (Capt.), Bowman, Lord, Rees, Laborde, Murray, Brathwaite, Dinwiddie, Reiter.

FRESH MANGOES from JAVA

Derby County's Bold Move

£3,000 For Gallacher's Transfer

Derby County made a bold move in obtaining the transfer of Hugh Gallacher, the Chelsea and Scottish international centre forward. Negotiations between the clubs took four days, and it then became a question of whether Gallacher would go to Derby.

A year ago he had refused to join Everton. The question was put to him and he took several hours to consider it.

Chelsea were frankly surprised when he said he was willing to sign for the County. He was married a short time ago, and I believe his wife influenced him in his decision. Gallacher was obtained by Chelsea from Newcastle United at a cost of £10,000, and this is his fourth season with the club. It was understood that Everton offered £4,000 for his transfer last season. Derby have paid £3,000.

URGENT NEED

The County required another centre forward urgently. Bowers has had a cartilage removed from his knee. A player usually needs about three months to recover from the operation, and the club's season, which had started so promisingly, was in danger for the want of an experienced leader.

It is not easy to imagine Gallacher as the Derby centre forward. He is of an entirely different type from Bowers, being about six inches shorter, and some adjustment of methods may be necessary. But Mr. George Jolley should find a way of making him a big success.

PETERSEN TO MEET COOK

TITLE FIGHT FIXED FOR DEC. 17.

Jack Petersen, British and Empire heavy-weight champion, will definitely defend his titles against George Cook, the Australian, at the Albert Hall on Dec. 17.

There was a suggestion that the date should be altered owing to the fact that on the 17th Mr. Seymour Hicks is to stage a theatrical matinee at which the King and Queen will be present and at which Petersen was invited to do some exhibition boxing.

Unfortunately, Mr. Jeff Dickson, the boxing promoter, could not very well alter his original arrangements for the contest. If he brought the match forward it might clash with a tournament and championship match at Wembley on December 9. So Petersen will meet Cook on the 17th, but arrangements will probably be made whereby he can accept the matinee invitation.

TO INCLUDE BRITAIN, EUROPEAN COUNTRIES AND AMERICA

TO BE RUN ON DAVIS CUP LINES

London, Dec. 7.

An international association football competition on Davis Cup lines is being planned.

At first it would include only British and most of the European countries. Eventually, South America, the United States and other countries might be brought in.

The plan is being devised by European football legislators who are understood to have talked it over with the British officials when they attended the England v. Italy match in London, on November 14.

A rough outline of the plan is that there should be four zones, Great Britain, northern, middle and southern Europe. Each zone would hold its own knock-out competition, and there would follow inter-zone semi-finals and a final.

In future years the holders of the championship would compete only in the challenge round, as is the case in the Davis Cup Competition.

TIME OPPORTUNITY

For some time, the continental countries have been eager to include the British teams in a competitive tournament. They feel that the time has come when matches between European national teams and England, Scotland, Wales or Ireland should not be confined to friendly matches, often played out of season. They claim that the suggested competition would be certain of financial success, and could, either replace the present British international competition, or be run separately.

Tavel would be reduced to a minimum by the introduction of zones, and matches could be played in mid-week. To prevent the competition from going on too long, because of the replaying of drawn games, such games could be decided on corner-kicks. The team forcing the greatest number of corners would be the winners of the match.

The match between England and Italy will add force to the arguments of the proponents of the plan, because it is regarded as the unofficial championship of the world. Italy are European and world champions as the result of competitions this year in which British teams did not compete. To beat the country where football originated would make them undisputedly supreme.

MANY DIFFICULTIES

There are many difficulties in the way of the scheme. The principal one is the difference between the British and European codes. The former allows "charging," the latter does not. Up to the present, practically every international match between a continental team and one of the four British national teams has been followed by excuses on the part of one or the other, concerning unfamiliar conditions, state of grounds, refereeing, and the like.

So far as the British teams are concerned, one of the chief difficulties would be the release of players by the League clubs at a time when teams would be struggling for League points, and when the absence of one or two star players might make all the difference between safety and relegation.—United Press.

PROFESSIONAL TENNIS PLAYERS' PLANS

termed the "barnstorming" element would thus be removed, and, with recognitions and sanctions from these bodies, professional and amateur lawn tennis could go hand in hand, and the carrying on of professionalism would be constructive for the good of the game.

Details of the scheme envisaged the holding of four championship meetings each year, one each in England, France, Germany, and the United States, one of which would be a world championship with the venue allocated in rotation. A cup has been presented by M. Bonin, which is intended to be the "Davis Cup" of professional lawn tennis, and the U.S.A., Germany, France and Ireland are already going to challenge, while it is hoped that England and Czechoslovakia will also be there.

Tilden's proposals, if carried into effect, will merit the most careful consideration of amateur governing bodies, and they certainly tend, as he claimed, to clarify the situation and remove differences which were based on errors and misconceptions between the two groups.

Tilden announced that, as a result of long interviews with M. Pierre Gillon, the President of the French Lawn Tennis Federation, it was proposed to form an International Players' Association for the purpose of developing international, national, and sectional championships, which they trusted would meet the desires of the international amateur body.

At a luncheon given in London last month W. T. Tilden outlined a scheme which, if it is brought into operation, will revolutionize the conditions and outlook of competitive lawn tennis.

SATURDAY'S BOXING

COLONY CHAMPION CONTESTANTS

The stage is all set now for the first boxing programme of the season which is to take place at the Leo Theatre on Saturday night.

As previously announced, the principal fight of the evening will be that between Stoker Pryall (H.M.S. Suffolk) and Stoker Dee (H.M.S. Phoenix). Both men have had considerable experience in the ring, and their contest on Saturday is to decide the Lightweight Championship of the Colony.

Stoker Pryall has fought 150 professional bouts and has never been knocked out. Recently he won two fights against well-known professionals in Australia and also holds the Lightweight Championship of the West Indies.

SPORT ADVTS.

THE HONG KONG JOCKEY CLUB

The THIRTEENTH EXTRA RACE MEETING will be held (Weather permitting) at HAPPY VALLEY on Saturday, 15th December, 1934, commencing at 2.00 p.m.

The First Bell will be rung at 1.30 p.m.

By Order,

C. B. BROWN,

Secretary.

Hongkong, 10th December, 1934.

Stoker Dee has figured in many fights in the West of England, and is the present holder of the Fly and Bantam-weight Championships of Cornwall. In addition he is holder of the Prince of Wales Belt, competed for in the Duchy of Cornwall. He has been in more than 150 fights since taking up boxing.

Battling Chan, who is at present at the Flying Training School at Kai Tak, was holder of the Bantam-weight Championship of North Malaya, and his fight with Corporal Marsden promises some excellent boxing. Marsden holds one of the best records for his weight in the Far East, and won a reputation for himself when he drew with Frankie Ash just before the latter fought for the World Championship.

Signalman Reid (H.M.S. Keppel) who is to fight A. B. Prandy (H.M.S. Kent) in a 6-round Middleweight contest in a sparkling fight, and the battle should be one of the tit-bits of the evening.

Cpl. Fitzgerald (H.M.S. Medway) and Stoker Armitage (H.M.S. Sandwich) are to fight over 6 rounds (Middleweight). They are a well-matched pair and should both give a good account of themselves. The fight is expected to go the full distance.

A. B. Parker (H.M.S. Medway), who is fighting A. B. Appleby (H.M.S. Pandora), in a 6-round Welterweight contest, has a reputation locally as a rugged fighter and is very popular with local fans. He has put up some exceptionally good performances in the past.

The other contest will be between A. B. Wingrave (H.M.S. Phoenix) and A. B. Fancy (H.M.S. Medway) in a 6-round Welterweight contest.

Canton Tennis Championship

LAI KWONG-TSUN BEATS GEORGE BODIKER

Canton, Dec. 10. George Bodiker was beaten by Lai Kwong-tsun in three straight sets in the final of the International Lawn Tennis Club Singles Championship of Canton played at the Yuet Sou Tennis Club, Tungshan, yesterday.

The match, which drew a large number of keen tennis fans, was played under ideal weather conditions, and the arrangements regarding the courts and their unfortunate situation close to the traffic lines somewhat upset the concentration of the players.

Bodiker appeared slightly off form on the hard court surface, probably due to his match against Watson the previous day on grass, and as a result did not hit his drives with his usual crispness and confidence. Lai Kwong-tsun on the other hand was playing better tennis than he has shown here for a long time and fought hard for every point earned.

Lai Kwong-tsun on several occasions had Lai chasing from side to side and was returning beautifully, but often when it looked as though Lai must lose the point, Bodiker would net or play out when in a safe position to play an easy winner.

HIGH STANDARD

In spite of these little failings, the standard of tennis was high and the points very keenly contested throughout the match. However, after a hard fought tussle Lai Kwong-tsun prevailed in three straight sets by 7/5, 6/3, and 6/2.

On Saturday the final of the open doubles was played and was won in four sets by Lau Fook-ling and Chan Chi-keung over Lai Kwong-tsun and Leung Tak-ki. The winners showed far superior combination and fairly outplayed their opponents.

After the singles match yesterday, Mrs. Kanter presented the trophies.—Our Own Correspondent.

RUGBY BLUES

CAMBRIDGE TEAM-BUILDING

Captain of Cambridge Rugby W. J. Leather has awarded Blues to P. R. Bowring (Rugby and Trinity) and P. L. Candler (Sherborne and Pembroke).

Bowring is a rather small but very hard-working forward who has been in the running for a Blue for at least two years. Last season he was most unfortunate enough to get injured at a critical period of the term.

Candler is really a fly-half, but Cliff Jones secured that position over his head last season and he has now developed into a splendid centre three-quarter.

Kowloon retaliated and found the net through Parker. Towards the end, Pile sent the ball into the net but the point was disallowed for an infringement and the final result was a draw.

JAPANESE REPLY TO CHARGES OF AERODROME-BUILDING

Tientsin, Dec. 11.

Mr. Chang Ting-yo, Mayor of Tientsin, has lodged a protest with General Umetau, Commander of the Japanese Garrison Forces in North China, against the alleged construction of an aerodrome at Nankai, Tientsin, by the Japanese military authorities.

According to a general Chinese version, work on the aerodrome has been in progress for a long time, and it is now completed. It is also said that the aerodrome is capable of accommodating twenty-five planes and in it, an oil tank has been built.

However, the Japanese have repeatedly denied the allegation and declared that the supposed aerodrome construction in the quarter in question at Nankai was merely a piece of civil engineering work undertaken by a private Japanese concern.—Central News Agency.

BRITAIN PLEASED

BALKAN CRISIS AT AN END

London, Dec. 11.

The success of the conciliatory efforts at Geneva is warmly welcomed by the British Press and satisfaction is expressed that the British delegate played an important part in the negotiations leading up to a solution of the immediate deadlock.

In presenting the resolution to the Council Mr. Eden said it must be observed that the Council was not a Court of Justice. It had no means of undertaking judicial enquiries. Its function was to assist parties in establishing political relations, desirable between members of the League. In concluding his brief speech, Mr. Eden said the Council had in the past often appealed to the wisdom and spirit of conciliation of governments which had reposed confidence in the League. None of these governments would think that he exceeded his right as Rapporteur. He expressed a sincere hope for good understanding, which should exist between the parties to this dispute, and expressed his confidence that they would avoid anything which might be of a nature to compromise it.—British Wireless.

BRITAIN'S HELP

CHINESE ECONOMIC MISSION

London, Dec. 11.

The Chinese Minister to London (Mr. Quo Tai-chi) gave a luncheon party to-day in honour of Mr. Yu Fei-peng (leader of the Chinese Economic Mission to Europe), General Siu Zing-yao (leader of the Mission's military section), and General Hao Tang-chiu (head of the aviation section). Other leading members of the Mission were also present.

The guests included Lord Londonderry (Secretary of State for Air), Lord Hallisham (Secretary of State for War), Lord Strathcona, Mr. Hore Bellah (Minister for Transport), Sir Victor Wellesley, and Mr. D. G. M. Bernard (Chairman of the China Association).

Mr. Quo Tai-chi warmly thanked members of the British Cabinet present for the kind way in which they had received the Mission, and for their friendly help. The Mission was making a more extended study of England than of any other country. This was evidence of Chinese friendship and trust in England, which, plainly, was warmly reciprocated.

He was gratified to note that the Chinese situation was being closely watched and increasingly understood in England. This was evident from articles in the Press and remarks in Parliament.

A dozen years ago, said the Chinese Minister, British and American statesmanship had collaborated at Washington to give treaty force to their conviction that a strong and united China was the best guarantee of peace and prosperity in the Far East.

The Chinese National Government was steadfastly pursuing a reconstruction programme, extending its authority over the vast area of the Chinese Republic, while the whole world's need of equitable markets was greater than ever.

The urgent requirement of both China and the world was a reaffirmation of the inviolability of the twin principles of Chinese integrity and equal opportunity for all nations to trade with China, as embodied in the Nine Power Treaty.

The time seemed to be at hand, said Mr. Quo, for British and American statesmen to take the lead in supporting the principles established in 1922 at Washington.

Lord Hallisham's Reply

Lord Hallisham made a most friendly and sympathetic reply, without touching on the diplomatic issues raised in Mr. Quo Tai-chi's speech.

He warmly admired what the Chinese Government was doing and expressed pleasure at meeting the members of the Chinese mission. He hoped they would obtain everything they desired.—Reuter.

SERIAL STORY

The Clue Of The Forgotten Murder:

CHAPTER XXXI

Griff told the cab driver to wait and he and Bleeker approached the house, a house which had at one time been a pretentious private residence but was now given over to furnished rooms.

"Shall we," Bleeker asked as they entered the door, "get the landlady and inquire for Blanche Stanway?"

"I doubt," Griff told him, "if it's necessary."

He led the way up one flight of stairs, paused to listen in the hallway.

The sound of swift, excited voices came from a room toward the rear.

Griff nodded toward that room, "I think," he said, "that what we want is in there."

He walked noiselessly down the corridor, paused before a closed door.

On the other side of that door a woman was talking. Her voice was audible, but not her words.

Griff placed his hand on the knob, turned it noiselessly, shoved the door open.

A fleshy woman with hard, green eyes and stringy, lack-lustre hair which had been cut in a square bob was seated on a chair, a mocking smile playing about her lips.

Standing near the window, clad in black, was Mrs. Frank Cathay. Her face was white and tragic. There was a baffled look of hopeless defeat in her eyes.

Nearer the doorway, standing with his side to the door, his big shoulders squared, his face flushed with rage, was Carl Racine, the detective.

Griff's voice was cheerful. "Do we intrude?" he asked.

They stared at him. Mrs. Cathay's face showed bewilderment. Racine's face was white with cold anger.

The woman who was seated in the chair shifted her hard, green eyes to regard the visitor with a curiously which seemed almost casual.

"We want very much," Griff went on, "to interview Mrs. Blanche Stanway, or perhaps she might prefer to be called Mrs. Blanche Malone."

The smile faded from the lips of the woman.

"I don't know any Blanche Malone," she said. "My name is Blanche Stanway. Tell me what you want."

"You," Racine said to Griff in a voice that quivered with rage, "can wait in the corridor until we get done talking. This is none of your damn business!"

Griff smiled serenely.

"Racine," he said, "you are a man who knows the law. Perhaps you also know the penalty for compounding a felony."

Mrs. Cathay surveyed the men with tired eyes, eyes which seemed hopelessly weary of it all, from which hope had vanished. There remained only the grim tenacity of a fighting breed.

Carl Racine moved ominously forward.

"I'm telling you fellows," he said, "to get out. This is a private conference."

Dan Bleeker, 30 pounds lighter than the big detective, and 10 years older, pushed aggressively forward.

"Try and put us out," he snapped. Sidney Griff spoke in tones that were calmly suave.

"It happens," he said, "that Mr. Bleeker represents The Blade. It is his duty to see that The Blade is interested in this interview, as doubtless the police will be."

Racine glowered at Bleeker, his manner truculent, but his eyes suddenly shifted to those of the criminologist as Griff finished speaking.

Mrs. Cathay, white-lipped, her nostrils dilated, regarded Griff with eyes that were dark with emotion.

"I presume," she said, "you want me to beg and cringe. I won't do it."

"How," asked Racine, "did you find out about this?"

Griff smiled at him. "How did you find out about it?" he countered.

Mrs. Cathay whirled to the hard-faced woman who sat in the chair, regarding them with glittering appraisal.

"Regarding talk," she said, "you're not going to do yourself any good."

"If you don't talk," he said, "you're going to put yourself in a very questionable position."

The woman laughed. Her laugh was harsh, rasping and discordant.

"My, my," she said, "how important I seem to be getting all of a sudden! Well, I'm not going to talk—not because she told me not to, and the woman spat out the feminine pronoun with a bitter, scornful emphasis.

to her previous success, however great. Fredric March gives Robert Browning the dash and fire that is in his manner. With Norma Shearer he plays three of the most exquisite love scenes ever to be recorded by the motion picture camera. Charles Laughton does the tyrannical father with a terrific restrained power. So thoroughly does he dominate proceedings that it is with difficulty the audience avoids demonstrations against his characterization of these three stars, strong enough to ensure the success of any picture, stronger still by such inspired casting. Nor does the perfect casting end with the stars. Everyone in the supporting cast has been rightly chosen. Directed by Sidney Franklin, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" stands out as a distinguished achievement in any screen year.

"Death on the Diamond" gripping detective mystery dealing with weird killings in a baseball team during a pennant season, opens to-morrow at the Queen's Theatre in conjunction with the Rhapsody Girls' Revue. Written by Cortland Fitzsimmons, author of "7,000 Witnesses", and filmed with the co-operation of the St. Louis Cardinals, the picture is a unique blend of actual baseball, thrills, mystery, and uproarious comedy, directed by Edward Sedgwick, noted for his sports pictures of the past. The shooting of a player, stealing second, before 80,000 screaming fans, weird attacks in the clubhouse, and other fantastic detail is heightened by comedy situations and a love story in which Robert Young and Madge Evans figure as the two principals. The cast includes C. Henry Gordon, David Landau, Nat Pendleton, Ted Healy, Edward Brophy, James Ellison, Pat Flaherty, Pat O'Malley, Joe Sauer and others. Adapted to the screen by Harvey Thew and Joe Sherman, the picture was dialogued by Ralph Spence. Actual quarters of the Cardinals were used as a "location", and material assistance was given in making the picture by the Cincinnati Reds and the Chicago Cubs. Amid the romance, comedy and baseball thrills, runs a detective story in which suspicion falls on nearly thirty characters, before, in the final scene in the picture, the mystery is suddenly solved by a dramatic twist.

phasia, "but because I'm going to get a lawyer to do my talking for me."

"Who," asked Griff, "is your lawyer?"

"I don't know," she said. "I'm going to get one."

"The police," said Griff, "may want to know something about this."

"The police," she retorted calmly, "can keep on waiting."

"I'm going to ask you just once more," Mrs. Cathay said, "to consider my position."

The woman's eyes swept Mrs. Cathay in hostile appraisal.

"You went to a lot of trouble to find me, didn't you?" she said.

"Just because you thought I could do you some good. How about the long years before? You didn't take any trouble to find me then? You didn't care what I was doing. If you want to know, I was scrubbing floors in office buildings. Think of that! Down on my hands and knees, crawling around, scrubbing floors, cleaning spittoons, my hands in dirty soap suds, scrubbing, scrubbing, scrubbing! Always scrubbing! While you were powdered and perfumed, painted and manicured, riding around with a chauffeur in a shiny automobile, reclining on soft cushions, having maids to do your hair and keep your face beautiful."

She broke off abruptly and once more gave that harsh, scornful laugh.

"I will say this," she said, "the world has handed me enough knocks. I know enough now to look out for myself and I'm going to look out for myself."

"Will you," asked Griff, "make any statement?"

Griff turned to Bleeker and shrugged his shoulders.

Mrs. Cathay's eyes watched the criminologist with stark terror appearing in their depths.

Racine spoke to her in a rumbling monotone.

"They're newspaper men," he said. "Don't talk to them."

She hit her lip and was silent.

Racine crossed to Mrs. Cathay, took her by the arm and piloted her toward the door.

"Remember," he said, "we've got other places to go and other things to do."

"You won't find her!" shrieked the woman, who remained seated in the chair by the window. "Go ahead and try all you want to—you can't find her."

"If," said Griff in calm tones, "you're referring to the girl who is variously known as Esther Ordway or as Alice Lorton, the girl who was the daughter of Frank B. Cathay, you will find that she was registered at the Elite Apartments, number 319 Robinson street."

Mrs. Cathay stared at him, her eyes wide with astonishment.

The woman who had been seated by the window jumped to her feet. Her face was livid with fury. Her gnarled hands were clenched into fists.

"Damn you!" she said.

"And," went on Griff, his eyes fastened upon the face of Mrs. Cathay, "if you want to see her, you'll find that she isn't in her apartment. You'll need a pass from the police if you're going to visit her. At the present moment she's at police headquarters where she's booked on suspicion of murdering Charles Morden, a reporter for The Blade."

(To Be Continued.)

CONTRACT BRIDGE

Solution to Previous Contract Problem

By W. E. McKenney

There is no such thing as a perfect bidding system. That's the thrilling part about contract. You never can figure it out.

You can take the best players, playing for high stakes, where they know it does not pay to over-bid their hands; still they will pick up a hand occasionally which will take them for a terrific set. Many think that the experts never go down a thousand points. But that is why contract is so interesting—no person or system can account for freakish distribution.

I was sitting in a restaurant in New York the other night, after a tournament, and there was a crowd of bridge players gathered around the table discussing unusual happenings and unusual holdings. One of the players, who has a good reputation as a money player, told about the following hand.

He called off the cards in the declarer's hand and asked if we didn't think it would be hard luck if a four spade contract were defeated with this holding. He agreed that there was a possibility of the hand being defeated a trick or two, so he did not redouble, but he thought he was justified in complaining of hard luck when the hand was defeated 2,000 points.

West opened the four of hearts. The declarer felt pleased with the first play, as he made a good guess—he put on the jack and East won with the ace. East returned the queen of diamonds. South played the king and West ruffed.

West's next play was a small club. Declarer thought he'd try to steal a trick, so he went up with the king in dummy and East won with the ace, returning the jack of diamonds on which South played the ace. West ruffed with the three of spades. The queen of clubs was West's next play and the declarer trumped with the four of spades.

Today's Contract Problem

East is playing the contract at four hearts, redoubled. West having opened the bidding with one spade and North having made a vulnerable overcall of two clubs. Can the hand be made, and can you give the logical reasoning for the play?

At this point, if the declarer led a small spade, he would have saved

DIFFICULTIES BEING REMOVED

London, Dec. 11.
Asked in the Commons if the Anglo-German Trade Agreement was working satisfactorily, and if he was aware that exporters were finding it difficult to do trade with Germany, owing to the difficulty on the part of some German importers of obtaining import certificates, Colonel Colville, Secretary of the Overseas Trade Department, said it was the case that difficulties of the character referred to were experienced in connection with the early working of the agreement.

These points, however, had been taken up, as they arose, with the German authorities by the British Embassy at Berlin, and he understood that the arrangements were working on the whole satisfactorily.

Colonel Colville, questioned about the Anglo-German payments agreement made on November 1, said that also was so far working satisfactorily, and that, including £400,- 000 paid when the agreement was signed, approximately £1,400,000 had now been made available by the German Government towards the liquidation of outstanding trade debts. Further sums would become available from time to time according to the terms of the agreement.

BRITISH NOTE TO WASHINGTON

WHITE PAPER
EXPLANATION

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Message Ordinance, 1924. Received, December 12, 1934, a.m.)

Washington, Dec. 11.
The British Ambassador to-day handed to Mr. Cordell Hull,
Secretary of State, a note from Great Britain explaining that His Majesty's Government would pay nothing on the War Debts account on December 15.

To make even a token payment would be useless, the note explained, and it would be unwise even to attempt negotiations. "But," the note added, "the Government will continue to watch for any effective opportunity for taking steps in the direction of negotiations."

The Finnish Minister notified the State Department that Finland would pay her semi-annual instalment on due on Saturday, amounting to $2,228,000. —United Press.

THE WHITE PAPER

London, Dec. 11.
A White Paper issued this evening contains a Note from the United States Government to the British Government transmitting a statement of amounts due under the provisions of the 1923 funding agreement and the moratorium agreement of June 4, 1932, together with the British Government's reply thereto.

The American Note conveys an assurance that the United States Government is fully disposed to discuss, through diplomatic channels, any proposals which the British Government might desire to put forward with regard to the payment of this indebtedness, adding that such proposals would receive careful consideration with

WELSH MINE DISASTER RELIEF FUND

Lord Mayor of London
Thanks Hongkong

The following letter has been received by Mrs. E. V. Hooper, Hon.
Treasurer of the Hongkong St.
David's Society, in acknowledgment of the Fund raised locally on behalf of the Gresford colliery disaster, the major part of which was subscribed by members of the Society:
The Mansel House,
London, E.C. 4,
6th November, 1934.

Dear Madam,
I thank you for your letter enclosing cheque for £33 7s. 4d., the result of a subscription list opened by the Hongkong Telegraph for the Gresford Colliery Disaster Fund.
I should be glad if you would convey to the editor of that paper, and through him to all the contributors, my sincere appreciation of their generous response to my appeal.

Yours truly,
CHAS. H. COLLETT,
Lord Mayor.

a view to eventual submission to the American Congress.

The British reply, dated December, 10, after welcoming this assurance, states:—"In June last,
His Majesty's Government explained the circumstances which had forced them to decide to suspend payments under the funding and moratorium agreements, pending a final revision of the war debt settlement. In that Note, it was stated that recent events had shown that discussions with a view to final revision of the settlement could not at that time usefully be renewed."

"His Majesty's Government have again most carefully reviewed the position, but they regret that they have reached the conclusion that the considerations which governed their decision six months ago apply with equal force to-day. Accordingly, they feel it would be useless, and therefore unwise, to initiate negotiations at present, but they will continue to watch for any effective opportunity of taking steps in that direction." —British Wireless.
